Villa, in Interview, Outlines Plans

TO DEPOSE HUERTA HIS ONLY AIM

By GERALD BRANDON.
Staff Correspondent of the American with the Rebel Army.

SALTILLO, May 25, via Brownsville, Texas, May 26.—"Truly I have battled much and have accomplished divine things," said General Villa when, upon his arrival at Saltillo, I congratulated him on the success of his army.

The chief of the Chihuahua division of the Constitutionalist army reclined on a sofa in his headquarters, resting from the fatigue of a sixty-mile ride. He bade me draw a chair beside him, and we conversed at length on the three campaigns in which we had been companions.

"Tell me about the United States," he asked when he heard that I had left New York but ten days ago. "What do they think of me?"

"The American people admire your military record," I answered, "but are inclined to resent the death of Benton and other similar incidents."

"You would have done even as I," answered Villa. "Benton drew his gun and tried to kill me. My boys disarmed him with difficulty. Who knows what bad advice he had received from the Clericos? When at last he realized that he was going to be shot he asked for a word alone with me. I granted him his wish and then he begged me to promise to grant a greater favor.

"What is it?" I asked.

"Promise first that you will grant it," he insisted.

ANY WISH BUT ONE.

"I then told him that I would give him anything except his life.

"No. I do not ask to be pardoned," he said. "You are quite right to kill

MORGAN TO SHOW HIS BOOKS

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today authorized a denial of the report that President Wilson had made suggestions to the commission regarding his wishes in the New Haven investigation, and indicated what witnesses he desired examined. It was declared that President Wilson had made no suggestions to the commission, "either directly or indirectly" concerning the inquiry.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Because of her slip she was clean across the J. P. Morgan, jr., informed the Interstate Commerce Commission early today that he "would be pleased to allow them to examine all of the books of Morgan & Co. as well as his personal accounts and those of his father," Commissioner McChord today adjourned the New Haven hearing until June 3.

In the meantime representatives of the commission will go to New York and examine all the available records of the Morgan family.

Louis Cass Ledyard, one of the prominent directors of the New Haven, who was present when the hearing opened today, registered an emphatic protest against this adjournment.

"I want to testify before the commission as soon as possible," said Ledyard. "I want to give the facts in the New Haven deal; the facts which have not yet been given. I am prepared to deny and controvert much of what Mr. Mellen testified to last week. Much of his testimony I know to be incorrect, and I wish to give the commission the benefit of what I know about this matter. This is a

BIG LINER SINKS TWO BARGES

NEW YORK, May 26.—Excitement and adventure attended the departure today of the gigantic New Hamburg-American liner Vaterland, the biggest steamship afloat, when she left on her second voyage across the Atlantic, carrying 3,000 passengers.

Warned by his experience of last week, when the giantress broke away from the twenty-one tugs that were trying to guide her into her Hoboken pier, Captain Ruser decided to back out and down the bay under his own steam.

But when the Vaterland backed out of her slip she was clean across the Hudson before her officers realized it. There was a great shouting of orders and the engines were started full speed ahead.

The leviathan lunged forward like a race horse, her sharp prow throwing up a wave with the size and force of a tidal wave. Two barges, each carrying 500 tons of coal were caught by the wash and overturned, going to the bottom. Ferryboats and tugs rocked like chips.

Two Southern Pacific liners at their piers were caught by the suction and their hawsers snapped, leaving them at the mercy of the water.

It is estimated that $20,000 damage was done by the big ship.

On her way through the lower bay the Vaterland touched the shallows and was in sore danger of going ashore. Her engines were stopped and she was halted for five minutes before getting her bearings.

On the charge of having for sale inferior milk, the H. P. Hood & Son Company of No. 494 Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, was summoned into South Boston Court today to answer to one count, but failed to appear. C. Brigham Company, Cambridge, was found guilty on four counts and was fined $50. The company appealed. Anna Walanta, No. 42 Third street, South Boston, was fined $15. She appealed and was held in $100. Henry A. Smith of No. 11 First street, South Boston, was fined $15. Maria M. Jux was fined $10 for selling "vinegar" composed of sugar, water and acid.

Youth Is Held for Newton Robberies

A youth who gave the name of John Bruno of Boston and is accused by the police of numerous robberies in Boston, Newton and Wellesley, was held in $1,000 for a hearing June 2 in Newton court today. He was arrested in Newton charged with entering two houses. Inspector O'Hallaran, finger print expert, declares Bruno is John L. Kadra of Boston, who has served two terms in a reformatory.

Winslow of Newton, protesting against the reinstatement of David Neagle as a Newton patrolman, Mayor Childs announced today that he would give a hearing on the matter in his office on Thursday afternoon. Free Contractor Who Killed Woman

Edward E. Breen, a Cambridge milk contractor, was discharged by Judge Almy in Cambridge court today on a charge of manslaughter. On the evening of May 14, Breen, while driving his car through Central square, Cambridgeport, ran down and killed Mary Allen, a domestic employed by G. Foster Sherburne of Lexington.

MAN HELD FOR TOYMAKER CRIME FACES ACCUSERS

BRADFORD, N. H., May 26.—"Silent Gene" Wood, arraigned here today for the murder of Howard W. Peaslee, pleaded not guilty, and the State began its efforts to fix the crime upon him.

The hearing was sensational. Two women were the principal witnesses. Miss Ida Barnes, the woman for love of whom Wood, according to the State, shot Peaslee, told the story of her acquaintance with each man; and Mrs. F. L. Osgood, a neighbor of the Peaslees, told how she had heard the shot that killed Peaslee and how she had seen the murderer slink away.

It was she, also, who gave the first testimony as to the threats Wood is alleged to have made against Peaslee. She said on one occasion she was talking with Wood and asked him about Mr. Peaslee. She said Wood had been drinking, and that he answered:

"I'll get him. I was loaded for him once, but I'll get him yet."

Wood himself sat through the hearing perfectly calm. He showed no concern at the State's attacks, made his plea of "not guilty" in a firm, strong voice, and gave no evidence of embarrassment when Miss Barnes, the woman whom gossip has it that he loved, began her story.

HEARING AT HOTEL.

The hearing took place in the double parlors of the Bradford Hotel at Bradford. All morning people had been driving up in autos or carriages, and some came in farm wagons. Others came by train. The hotel was filled and out in the roadway the country folk in groups discussed the case.

Shortly after 11 o'clock Judge J. W. Sanborn arrived. He took his seat at a small table at the inner end of the long room used as the hotel parlors. In reality there were two rooms, with hportieres hung between. These were drawn back. The light flooded in from windows at both ends of the double room.

Judge Sanborn sat with back to the windows and directly in front of a life-size painting of Mary Anderson, the famous actress. Over at one side was a piano, its keyboard show-

Another Good Story, Says Counsel Folk of Plant Wedding

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Counsel Folk says the New Haven investigation will go on until all the facts are brought out. The Department of Justice is still desirous of having no more directors examined, but to what extent the commission will favor this desire does not now appear.

"That will make another good story," said Folk, when shown a New London dispatch announcing engagement of Morton F. Plant, which fact he announced upon leaving a directors' meeting in that city. "If it is the same Plant whose doctor and attorney told us that he was too ill to obey our subpoena, if makes another New Haven director too sick to answer our questions."

An Injustice to Opportunity

The man who said that opportunity knocks but once at every man's door never read the "Business Opportunities" columns of the Boston American.

Here opportunity knocks daily. The wide variety of choice offerings—and the comparatively small sums required in most instances—make these columns attractive to thousands of enterprising men with capital.

And thus a new lease of life—and ultimate success—is gained by thousands of worthy enterprises.

If you fail to find exactly the opportunity you seek through this channel, write a "Want Ad" of your own. State exactly the sort of a proposition you are looking for and leave the ad with any of the American's "Want Ad" Stations, the branch office at 264 Washington Street, or the

NEW CITY HALL ANNEX FLOODED IN FIRE TESTS

Boston's $800,000 City Hall Annex, which was turned over to the city last Saturday, was flooded from roof to cellar today when the water curtains were tested by Wells Brothers, the contractors, for the Board of Fire Underwriters. The deluging of the structure was said to be due to defects in the placing of the sprinkler apparatus. Luckily for the city the final papers in the taking over of the new annex had not been signed, and it was announced that the damage, estimated at $3,000, would have to be met by the contractors.

For some reason the water not only curtained" the exterior of the building, but poured inside. Some of the floors were flooded ankle deep. Down stairways and elevator well small torrents gushed, injuring the floors and ceilings. In some places on the street the water rose as high as the curbing.

On the first floor, where the only offices occupied were in the assessors' departments, books and other records were soaked. It took a small army of janitors and helpers to bale out or mop up the water and set things rig'.

"The contractors must stand this loss," said Mayor Curley, "and they must remedy the defects."

AUTO PLUNGES INTO DYNAMITE; FOUR INJURED

HILLSBORO, N. H., May 26.—Four men were injured when an automobile struck a van carrying ten pounds of dynamite at Lower Village, near here.

Dr. William P. Grimes and his brother, John, were racing their autos. John, ahead, shot past the van. His auto kicked up so much dust the doctor did not see the van in time to dodge. He struck it square.

Eight men, a road gang, were on the van, one sitting on the box of dynamite. The automobile was making fifty miles an hour. Dr. Grimes was shot through his own windshield into the wagon. He, as a human projectile, knocked those on the van right and left. The dynamite was thrown out and landed in the road, but did not explode. The horse was knocked down and must be killed.

Dr. Grimes lost an eye and broke an arm. John Kemp was cut and bruised. So was Moses Gilman. George Morrill's ankle was broken. Herman Murdo was injured. E. C. Merrill, Samuel Jackson and Henry Hoy were shaken up. Four of them were taken home on stretchers and Dr. Grimes was rushed to Manchester for treatment.

INQUIRY BEGUN BY CORCORAN

District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County announced today he would lay before the Grand Jury the results of his sensational raid Saturday night on the Wayland Inn in Wayland, over the heads of the local police. At the same time the Grand Jury is to investigate numerous complaints made against various resorts in Middlesex.

In a statement the district attorney declared that startling charges had been made against a number of Middlesex hostelries. He said he had received many complaints from fathers whose daughters—High School girls—had been present at midnight revels in some of the inns.

GIVEN "PROTECTION."

In his statement the district attorney stated that information he had led him to believe there were "men higher up" who had given certain resorts "protection." His statement follows:

"I have received numerous complaints regarding what has occurred at numerous hostelries throughout the county," declared District Attorney Corcoran today. "The worst conditions imaginable are alleged by the writers of the letters, who include fathers of High School girls whose daughters have been present at midnight revels in these inns, and other respectable members of the several communities in which these places are situated. The complaints have been unanimous in their characterization of the places as evil resorts.

"The seriousness of the complaints led me to order the raid on the Wayland Inn last Saturday night. Since the raid, vivid rumors have reached my ears substantially to the effect that these places have been enjoying protection from the local authorities.

"As a result of these rumors I have decided to present certain evidence to the Grand Jury, rather than to the district courts in which such cases are ordinarily heard.

CORCORAN AT WORK.

"I shall leave no stone unturned in my endeavor to uncover the alleged rottenness and corruption surrounding the enforcement of the law in each instance brought to my attention.

"My information leads me to believe that 'men higher up' may be involved in affording protection to such places. Rumors to that effect have already been brought to my attention. I have heard much more than I am prepared to make public at the present time."

URGES CHANGE OF NAME FOR UNITARIANS

Rev. Lewis G. Wilson, secretary of the American Unitarian Association, speaking at the association's annual meeting in Tremont Temple today, declared that the name "Unitarian" was too "small and narrow a title," and one that was "inadequate and misleading." He urged a new name for the denomination. His address caused a stir among the delegates attending the convention from all parts of the country.

"Many of us who have had to contend against the unfair and bitter prejudices harbored against the name 'Unitarian' have for a long time realized the weight of our unsolicited and unnecessary burden," said Rev. Mr. Wilson.

"Of all the Christian denominations of Protestantism ours is the one beyond all others that is absolutely free from creedal limitations, and yet, it is a curious caprice of fate that our name is almost the only one among the various sects of Protestantism that associates its followers with a theologically dogmatic position. We hold no attitude of hostility towards any religious body. It is our mission to instruct, enlighten and harmonize the churches of Christendom, but the name we bear often prevents us from carrying out our purpose.

"In placing upon the liberal thinkers of the colonial church the name "Unitarian" their opponents clothed them in an ill-fitting garment which they wore with much reluctance.

"It never has been a name to conjure with, and while there is no person in this presence who realises more deeply than I do what real Unitarianism connotes in the minds of those who are familiar with its genius and its history, at the same time no one can realise more fully than I do the need of some name which will suggest the vast sweep of our religious interests and the intensity of our positive belief.

"Beyond all this we must recognise the fact that through the influence of our great State universities a generation is just coming upon the scene whose knowledge of religion will be unsectarian and scientific. These young people will care nothing for theological technicalities, but will be efficient candidates for membership in churches that are based upon the recognition of universal religious principles.

"The term "Unitarian" has been in use since the sixteenth century. Then it was applied to a number of Protestants, who believed in the unity of the godhead and denied the doctrine of the Trinity. The term has been in use in New England for over two hundred years.

"In the third century Arius was called the first Unitarian.

Margaret Foley Says She's Proud of the American

Margaret Foley, Suffragist leader, paid a tribute to the AMERICAN at a big suffrage meeting in Lawrence. Lifting before the audience an editorial page of the AMERICAN with a suffrage cartoon on it, she said:

"There is a paper that believes in a square deal. They come out for the right, fearless and honest. I'm proud to have one in my hand. I'm proud of anyone or any institution that stands for the right, and the AMERICAN certainly does. They not only do wonders for the suffrage cause but for countless other things. The paper is a wonderful institution, and may it continue forever in the good work it is performing."

Kaiser's Son Is to Wed Morganatically; Germany Shocked

BERLIN, May 26.—German nobility, society and officialdom were aghast today when Prince Oscar of Prussia, fifth son of Kaiser Wilhelm, publicly announced his engagement to marry Countess Ina Marie, daughter of Count Bassewitz of Mecklenburg.

It is the first instance on record where a male of the reigning branch of the Hohenzollerns has been morganatically engaged to wed. While the young Countess is a woman of rank, she is not of royal blood.

It is believed the Kaiser will either break the engagement or banish his son.

2,000 NEWSIES TO BE GUESTS AT SOX GAME

"This fellow Lannin is a prince," says Happy—and two thousand lusty young voices are going to yell their agreement Saturday morning at Fenway Park. For Joseph J. Lannin, president and treasurer of the Red Sox, has invited 2,000 newsies to be his guests in the first base bleachers at Saturday morning's game.

"Will we be there—well, watch us," Happy answered. Happy, being the King of the newsboys, is the fellow these invitations come to. He passed the word around and Saturday morning's issue is going to be the noisiest Fenway Park ever saw—or heard.

You will be able to hear the game from the State House. But you won't be able to see it—and seeing it is the best part—unless you're right there.

The boys will meet in Postoffice square at 8:30. The game is at 10. Then, 2,000 strong and led by a band, they will march to the park.

Before the game the newsies will present a floral horseshoe to Lannin by way of thanks. Mr. Lannin and Secretary Edwin L. Riley will be in a box at the game. Secretary Riley is working overtime on arrangements to receive the newsies in proper manner.

Every newsie in the crowd is to be equipped for the fray. They will have lapel flags, clappers, rattles, horns and a hundred kindred instruments of noise and tumult. If you're in Boston, you'll hear it. But you won't see it unless you're in Fenway Park.

DELAY IN SALE OF BOYLSTON ST. LAND BY TECH

In a statement today explaining the effect of the Supreme Court decision that the Massachusetts Institute of Technology might sell its land on Boylston street, but that the purchaser could obtain nothing more than the mere title, the Institute said:

"The drawback is that the decision makes it practically impossible for the institute to sell its property in the immediate future and thus obtain means for completing the great group of buildings that are peeping above ground on the banks of the Charles. The Institute will thus be forced to look to generous benefactors to do what it would otherwise have done without this assistance.

"Until the property can be disposed of on reasonable terms, which would mean some equitable removal of the restrictions, Technology will continue to carry on some part of its scientific work in the Rogers and Walker buildings. What portion this may be has not yet been determined, but there are certain courses that may so be treated with comparatively little inconvenience."

It is possible and easy —even for the man without early education— to get a comprehensive grasp of the world's History and of Human Thought.

Buckle's History of Civilization in England

Is unquestionably the most admirable and complete history of man's thought and of his REAL history that has ever been written. Carefully read this wonderful book. Will give any man the foundation of a complete education.

The Boston American has arranged for the publication of this work in four volumes complete for $1.

It has never previously sold for less than $4.00, but because of the tremendous quantities that we intend to distribute we have forced the producing cost down to its lowest point and we intend to distribute these books without regard to profit.

You can secure these books from your local dealer or you may order them direct from the Boston American Promotion Department, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston.

MRS. TINGLEY OUTLINES NEW SCHOOL PLAN

Mrs. Katherine Tingley, head of the International Theosophical Brotherhood and founder of the unique Point Loma School in California, announced in Boston today that she would found one of her schools in or near Boston within a year.

Mrs. Tingley has schools in Cuba and in Sweden as well as at Point Loma. In her schools children live all their time under the care of teachers. They dwell in Grecian surroundings, wear Grecian robes and have freedom of clothes, thought and customs.

Her doctrine is that education must come from within the child, that teachers can only cultivate the child's growth.

"The educational methods I advocate will make children abhor tight and immoral gowns, improper dances and such moral nuisances. Children today are moral wrecks."

MUST BALANCE FACULTIES.

She plans to erect her school buildings somewhere along the Charles River, probably in Wellesley, where the woods will make it possible to secure a high degree of isolation. At the same time, the headquarters of the Brotherhood will be removed from No. 24 Mt. Vernon street to the building on Huntington avenue opposite Symphony Hall. Mrs. Tingley said:

"Education should balance all the faculties, physical, mental and moral; should combine home life with school life; should be without competition or the marking system; must be without cliques or fraternities; must be made a pleasure for the child.

"Boston needs a new type of education. It has been called the centre of education for the United States.

"I believe that Boston is still the most cultured city in the United. But why do we not get rid of this immodest dress, these uncouth manners of both sexes? Why should the young woman separate her education from the training of her morals?

"At present we are engaged in filling the mind with knowledge. Then we call that education.

"We don't need the kindergarten system, nor the Montessori system, but take your children in early life and let them use their faculties in the way that they see the flowers and plants grow up. Through music and teaching the use of their little faculties in ways that I have described in my system, we are getting the best results.

FRATICAL EDUCATION.

"What I aim to do for Boston is this:

"The practical side of education must be the strongest side.

"It is not the education of the mind, but of the whole being. This will show itself in the outward dress of the girls who will no longer feel that loud fashions must rule them, but they will help in educating fashion.

"Ther is the control of the will in education. We can teach the boy and girl to think over problems, but this is not education.

"What they have acquired must express itself through their lives in every detail—education that comes from within not, from without; education that goes into the home life; make the school co-operate with the home; keep them together.

"So I am coming to Boston to demonstrate what I mean by education. My results must be looked after carefully. What results I have aimed to produce, must speak for themselves.

SAYS WIDOW IN WARD WILL CASE 'ACTED A FOOL'

That the late George Ward, a Newton real estate dealer, whose will is being contested by his widow, Mrs. Annie H. Ward, and his brothers and sisters, stated that his wife had "acted like a fool" ever since he had lived with her, that she was hysterical, nervous, irritable and fussy was testified to today by Frank H. C. Reynolds of Brookline, executor of the will, when the case was called for trial before Judge Brown and a jury in Superior Civil Court at East Cambridge.

Reynolds said he met Mrs. Ward for the first time at the court house in Boston. A hearing was held there on the day of Ward's death to decide who should have the body, the executor or Mrs. Ward. Reynolds was given the custody of the body.

A deposition by Dr. George Carlton Smith of Brookline, a heart specialist, was read. The physician deposed that Frederick Ward, one of the contesting brothers, had told him that "you might as well stick a knife into my brother, as to let that woman see him." This was when Mrs. Ward, who had been estranged from her husband for many years, attempted to see him just before he died. Dr. Smith did not give her the permission she sought.

It is expected that Mrs. Emma Russell, a Boston trained nurse, who receives the residue of the estate and against whom the charge of undue influence over Ward is made by the contestants, will take the stand late this afternoon.

Hawley Quits Civic Centres

The resignation of Ralph E. Hawley, acting director of the extended use of public school buildings, under which the civic centres have been conducted, was received and accepted by the School Committee at a special meeting.

MRS. BRADISH COLLAPSES AT DEATH TRIAL

WORCESTER, May 26.— When shown the clothing and watch and chain of her dead husband, Mrs. Jennie Bradish collapsed today at the trial of Daniel J. Cooper, the Upton box maker, who is being tried for the murder of her husband, Alfred G. Brandish, in Upton last October. Brandish was shot with a revolver.

Insanity will probably be the defence. This inference was made upon the arrival of several noted alienists at the court house.

Jealousy over Mrs. Walter Balcom of Upton is said to have been the cause of the crime.

Charles F. Cummings of the Iver Johnson Arms Company testified the revolver is one which was sold to D. J. Cooper of Upton last May. He stated that the weapon had been used.

Charles Houghton of West Upton testified to seeing Bradish and Mrs. Balcom talking together on the afternoon of October 2, the day before the crime.

Plan to Make Tech State Institution

Plans are being perfected to have the State of Massachusetts and the Institute of Technology co-operate more extensively with the final outcome to have "Tech" become a great State university. Members of the Tech faculty will be given additional places on State boards and commissions and their work increased where technical skill is required.

NEW EVIDENCE UNEARTHED IN MULLINS CASE

Attorney Frank McDermott of North Cambridge, one of the lawyers for James Mantir and Peter C. Delorey, the two young men sent to State prison three years ago for the murder of Annie Mullins, and who have since protested their innocence, announced today that he has discovered new important evidence that he believes will have a great effect in the way of obtaining a pardon for the clients.

Both Attorneys McDermott and Moroney expect to file their petitions for pardon with Governor Walsh within the next few days. It is believed that when the new evidence is made public it will prove a big sensation.

Meanwhile District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County is busily engaged in digging out all the evidence possible to prove the young men innocent.

Under direction of the district attorney's office detectives are secretly working on the case. Among those the important witnesses at the pardon hearing will be the Rev. M. J. Murphy, Catholic chaplain at the Charlestown State prison. District Attorney William J. Corcoran of Middlesex County, whose predecessor tried the case, will also be a witness.

Providence Talks City Market Plan

PROVIDENCE, May 26.—Marketmen resent the inference that they are trying to foist $65,000 worth of land on the city for a municipal market. The city's option on the land expired April 1. The objection to the site for a market is that it is too remote from the centre of the city. The present market place, on Crawford street bride, is advocated by a number of organizations representing the buying public. The site under discussion is several minutes' walk from the business centre.

BRITISH KING TO DEFY MILITANTS AT THE DERBY

EPSOM, England, May 26.—King George will defy the militant suffragettes tomorrow and attend the annual running of the Classic Derby upon Epsom Downs race course. Belief had prevailed in some quarters during the past few days that the King, in view of the recent activities of the women and their threats, would forego the traditional visit to see the derby. This was dispelled today.

The electric needle for removing hairy or fuzzy growths is fast falling into disfavor among beauty specialists, because quicker and better specialists, because quicker and better results are obtained with the aid of a paste made by stirring together a little powdered delatone and water. Hub Art Museum Seeks Treasures of Morgan Collection

Some of the late J. P. Morgan's $23,000,000 art collection will be purchased by the Boston Museum of Fine Arts this Summer, if the officials have their way. Director Arthur Fairbanks said today: "As to whether Boston can acquire any of the things is a matter purely of finances, and the willingness of the people to come forward and help us to add to our own museum."

WALSH SNUBBED WHEN WORK IS BEGUN ON THE STATE HOUSE WINGS?

Before the last edition of the AMERICAN is on the street this evening Governor Walsh may be hurrying to Washington.

And, while the telegram of invitation does not state exactly why the President desires to see the Governor at this time, it is taken for granted that the summons has to do with the railroad situation in New England, and particularly with the agreement between the Federal Department of Justice (Attorney-General McReynolds) and the New Haven Railroad with reference to the New Haven's ownership of Boston & Maine.

* * *

Why was it the Sergeant-at-Arms, and not His Excellency the Governor, who yesterday turned the first spadeful of earth for the $750,000 extension to the State House?

No other question will today be asked so many times by Democrats up and down the Commonwealth.

* * *

Whatever the Governor himself may think about it, it is reported that Mr. Walsh does not attach much importance to the incidental fact Democrats from all over the state made the object of a studied and deliberate slight. Some, indeed, use stronger terms about it.

Nor are the rough edges of the incident smoothed down perceptibly by the fact that "no member of the State House Building Commission"—Albert P. Langtry of Springfield, Joseph B. Russell of Cambridge and Neil McNeil of Boston—was personally in attendance.

* * *

It was said today that no time had been appointed for the ceremony. The inference is that it had not been intended to make the occasion ceremonious.

* * *

It was, however, ceremonious enough, and important enough, to call for the presence of protographers.

Somebody may happen along, sooner or later, with an official explanation, or an official apology. Or something of this sort. Unless the friends of the Governor will continue to feel that he was slighted deliberately and intentionally.

* * *

Little things of this kind in "politics" have been known to assume large proportions.

* * *

This was the day set by the House of Representatives for the special consideration of 1.—Larger City Council for Boston elected by districts.

2.—Allen R. Lawler's bill, providing a workable method for the recall of the Mayor of Boston.

3.—Bill suggested by the Governor for the abolition of party enrollment as a prerequisite for voting at primary elections.

In his Inaugural Address, the Governor repeated in substance what he had often said on the stump regarding Party Enrollment. Addressing the two branches of the Legislature on the eight day of January, Governor Walsh said:

* * *

The direct primary has made the selection of candidates for public office of even greater importance than their election, and there is widespread opposition throughout the Commonwealth to those provisions of the primary law which compel citizens to become enrolled in a political party before being allowed to participate in a primary election.

A fundamental right vested in the people is that of determining the way and the manner in which the desire to conduct their elections, and if there is a decided opposition to the present method, enquiring party enrollment, they should be provided with the kind of primary ballot they desire.

I recommend that party enrollment be abolished, and the enactment of legislation providing for a ballot containing in separate columns the candidates for nomination of the various political parties; that each voter be permitted to make his choice of the party column from which he desires to make his selection of candidates. He should have the right to do this secretly, without disclosing his party affiliations.

The Republican Committee on Ways and Means—named by Speaker Cushing, and undoubtedly reflecting the opinion of the Republican managers—has reported that the Party Enrollment Bill "ought not to pass." There are a few Democrats on each of the House Committees, of course, and the Democrats on the Committee (with Webster of Boxford, Progressive) dissent from the report of the Republican majority.

* * *

On a matter of this kind genuine Democrats and real Progressives find themselves on common ground.

They should have been found together in like fashion yesterday. Democrats outside the Legislature say—instead of permitting the defeat of the bill prevailing for "the representation of minority political parties on certain boards of election officers."

This Minority Party bill was defeated by a "tying" vote, 37 to 37.

This means that 151 of your Representatives were either absent or contrived to stand up and be counted. There was no roll call, but Representative Carr of Hopkinton, Progressive, served notice that he would today ask for reconsideration.

Of course, if the Democrats in the House are anxious to kill a Party Progressive Party, voting against this bill was one of the ways to do it. This bill would furnish enjoyment on primary day and election day, up and down the State, to about 1,000 Progressive workers. Republicans and Democrats are so employed under existing law.

* * *

Speaking of the Progressive Party reminds one of T. R., and the thought of T. R. brings to mind what was said at the State House yesterday by one of the leading militant Republicans of Massachusetts.

* * *

This prominent Republican — a genuine leader—is not now employed in a State office, but he has been. In personality, in "pep," and indeed in physical appearance, he is very much like the Colonel.

And this is what he said:

Theodore Roosevelt will receive the Republican nomination for President in 1916 and he will be elected to the Presidency.

* * *

Sashaying in and out of the State House one hears a lot of interesting say-so of this sort. Here is another, from a distinguished railroad attorney:

Doesn't it strike you as singular, to say the least, that the same Bostonians who stared with horror upon the unification of steam railroad lines south of Massachusetts with steam railroad lines north of Massachusetts, now come forward, through President P. F. Sullivan of the Bay State, to suggest and propose the unification of all surface lines south of Boston and all the trolley lines north of Boston, with the Boston Elevated thrown in?

* * *

"Think it over," says he.

* * *

So, think it over!

* * *

Note that "Tom" Niland's bill, giving East Boston eighty-cent gas, substituted in the House on a RISING vote—thirty-six to thirty-four—for the "gas-to-suit-the-trust" report of the Committee on Public Lighting.

* * *

Substitution being merely the first step—a bill takes three readings before it is passed by the House and sent to the Senate—you will please observe that a RISING vote places nobody on record, and a FOOT-rising vote, of only seventy out of 240 Representatives, doesn't mean much.

It is the belief of everybody at the State House that this gentleman from East Boston, Representative Thomas A. Niland, is going to get the lemon and, beloved brethren, no greater tribute could be paid to a member of your Legislature in ten and a half columns of type.

* * *

State Senator John P. Brennan of Cambridge, who voted on March 31 in FAVOR of the bill for the removal of the Elevated structures in Charlestown, the South End and lower Roxbury, and who was out of the Senate for a few minutes last Thursday, when the bill came up for its final reading—and was killed—rises now to say that if he had been present on Thursday he would have voted AGAINST the bill.

In which event the critics of Senator John P. would be calling him a "flopper" instead of a "dodger."

The Cambridge Senator has his reasons, however, and he is entitled to be heard!

* * *

"I should have voted against taking down the Elevated structures," Senator John P. says, "because Mayor Curley was against the bill and because of the great financial burden it placed upon the City of Boston."

* * *

These are Senator John P. Brennan's reasons, and it is for his constituents in Cambridge, enjoying a splendid tunnel instead of being nerve-racked by a railroad on stilts, to say what they think of them. As reasons, Mr. Brennan says the Cambridge folks got a tunnel because they went out and fought for it.

Representative Peter Tague, who led a victorious fight for the bill in the House, declares that the City of Boston would get back in increased taxes every dollar spent in replacing the overhead structures with subways or tunnels. He also reminds Senator John P. Brennan that all the Boston Senators save two—Nichols, Republican, and Leonard, Democrat—voted FOR the bill which further carried a referendum to all the citizens of Boston.

* * *

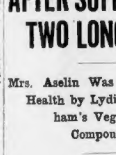
Friends of the other Senator Brennan—James H., of Charlestown—think the Charlestown Senator was overlooked in the AMERICAN'S account of Elevated Day in the Senate, perhaps to the political advantage of Representative Tague.

Not Intentionally.

AFTER SUFFERING TWO LONG YEARS

Mrs. Aselin Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Minneapolis, Minn.—"After my little one was born I was sick with pains in my sides and the doctors said were caused by inflammation. I suffered a great deal every month and grew very thin. I was under the doctor's care for two long years without any benefit. Finally after I repeated suggestions to try it we got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After I had the third bottle of the Compound I was able to do my housework and today I am strong and healthy again. I will answer letters if anyone wishes to know about my case."—MRS. JOSEPH ASELIN, 628 Monroe St., N. E., Minneapolis, Minn.



Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy we know for woman's ills. If you need such a medicine, why don't you try it?

No other medicine for women's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills.

There's SAFETY in

CAT'S PAW
CUSHION
RUBBER HEELS

If anything ails your feet you feel it all over.

Are your instep arches giving out and under the strain of your every day walking begins to ache?

Then you should wear Cat's Paw Cushion Rubber Heels

The muscles of the instep are constantly in their feet.

The corner of the foot extends down to the shank, thus preventing the arch from falling or the shoe running over.

Gives a firm but resilient support to the arch—keeps the position of the foot normal and natural.

THAT FOSTER PLUG PREVENTS SLIPPING

—even on wet sidewalks, pavements or the smooth-est floors. You step with safety and comfort when you wear Cat's Paw Rubber Heels.

Compare them with others—you will find no holes to track mud and dirt.

The extra quality of rubber gives greater resiliency and makes them wear longer.

Ask your shoeman for Cat's Paw Rubber Heels. They cost no more than the ordinary kind—50c. attached—black or tan.

MORGAN OFFERS HIS BOOKS FOR SCRUTINY IN NEW HAVEN PROBE

most important hearing and I think it should be concluded as soon as possible."

Commissioner McChord differed with the New York financier and stated again that the commission would consider it necessary to adjourn until next week. When McChord mentioned the word "immunity" in connection with Ledyard and his testimony the director of the New Haven broke in with:

"I want no immunity! I am willing to waive all immunity! I want to give the whole truth and I am perfectly willing to give a voluntary statement."

ROCKEFELLER HEARD FROM.

Further statements from Commissioner McChord convinced Ledyard that the commission would not let him testify today, so he agreed to be on hand "whenever wanted."

When the commission convened Folk stated that he had received affidavits from the physicians of William Rockefeller, George W. Miller, Treasurer Kochersperger and Samuel Moorehouse to the effect that none of these men could testify on account of their physical condition.

President Wilson has not yet taken any decisive action in the New Haven case. This fact was made public at the White House today. Reports that New Haven officials are to be criminally prosecuted by order of the President are characterized as untrue. Governor Walsh is expected at the White House tomorrow to discuss certain phases of the dissolution of the New Haven and the Boston & Maine. Reports that President Wilson has taken a hand in calling off the Folk investigation before the Interstate Commerce Commission are said to be without foundation by the White House officials.

From the testimony of expert witnesses today, it was learned that Morton F. Plant, New Haven director, and William Rockefeller are so busy, the former with getting married and the latter with celebrating his fiftieth wedding anniversary, that they have no time to bicker with government inquiries.

PLANT TOO ILL TO APPEAR.

Dr. Frank W. Hughes, for eighteen years a practicing physician of Groton, Ct., where Mr. Plant lives, was the first witness today. He verified a certificate which Governor Folk read, stating that among other things Mr. Plant was afflicted with heart trouble, a bony growth of the hip and several chronic diseases which would make a journey to Washington at this time prejudice in the extreme. Daniel Sullivan, attorney for Plant, testified to the truth of the statements contained in the certificates of ill-health.

Folk then asked about the reported marriage of the witnesses' client. They admitted that they had heard something about Plant's forthcoming nuptials ,but believed it unlikely that the knot would be tied "in the next day or two."

Examiner Brown of the commission then was called. He is the expert accountant. Folk sent him to interview William Rockefeller with a view to getting an unprofessional but horse sense opinion on the millionaire's physical condition.

Brown told a circumstantial story with gestures on his adventures in tracing Mr. Rockefeller.

"I went to William Rockefeller's office in New York city," said Brown, "and asked to see Rockefeller. I was told he was out of town. I asked where. The messenger I talked to said he did not know, but that Rockefeller had been away for weeks. I asked to see Rockefeller's private secretary. I was told he had gone with Rockefeller. The nl asked to see the office manager. There was no such official.

NOBODY IN AUTHORITY.

"I asked who was in authority in the absence of Rockefeller and his private secretary, and was told that no one was. The messenger informed me that the stenographers and messengers occupied the office in the absence of the office heads. I asked who received money. The messenger replied that he would.

"I then went to Rockefeller's home. A maid answered the doorbell and I asked to see Rockefeller. She said he was not at home and that she did not know where he was. I asked to see the housekeeper and was told that she too was out. I then asked the maid how long she had been employed there and she replied she had been there only a short time.

"I asked to see some older employes and she informed me that they were too busy and shut the door in my face. Subsequently I learned that Rockefeller was supposed to be at Greenwich, Ct., celebrating his fiftieth wedding anniversary."

Diagnoses Patient's Case by Wireless

LIVERPOOL, May 26.—A medical examination by wireless over a distance of 196 miles, followed by close diagnosis and prescription for treatment, is the latest achievement in inter-ship communication.

Just before the Orduna entered the Straits of Magellan a wireless message was received from the Herodotus saying her master was ill and asking the ship's surgeon to prescribe for him. Dr. Aylward asked five questions, which were put and answered within twenty minutes, after which he prescribed for the patient.

EXPERT URGES B. & M. OUTLAY OF $14,848,500

The Boston & Maine should spend $14,848,500 for additions, betterments and equipment within the next three years, according to recommendations in the report of Expert H. L. Miller, who has been investigating the road. He believes $1,000,000 a year will be required for freight car renewals and in five years, $4,398,000 will be needed for bridges. His report reveals mismanagement, especially in the supply department.

To meet these expenditures, Mr. Miller estimates a possible increase of $1,650,000 in revenue by raising rates. The Boston News Bureau says:

"Assuming such a $1,650,000 increase in revenue, and assuming that the Boston & Maine might be able to arrange with the Interstate Commerce Commission to defer or otherwise dispose of certain of the betterment charges, Mr. Miller figures that, on the existing financial structure of the Boston & Maine system, the Boston & Maine would for the first of three coming years realize a deficit from operations of $1,036,800; and that for the second year the deficit would be $1,295,000, and for the third year, $1,745,000.

WAGE SCALE A FACTOR.

"The report, which covers 120 pages of reading matter, tables, maps and photographs, and is understood to have cost the Boston & Maine over $15,000, finds , further, that:

"Future values of Boston & Maine securities depend upon what further wage increases may have to be made, upon expenditures for separation of grade crossings, and upon efficiency of administration.

"Existing freight rate divisions in connection with the New Haven seem to operate to the disadvantage of the Boston & Maine.

"One of the most demoralizing influences in Boston & Maine's operation is engine failures, continuing over the past seven years. To help obviate these failures, and incidentally effect a very satisfactory reduction in expenses, Mr. Miller proposes the abandonment of the road's locomotive and car shops at Concord, Lydonville, Mechanicville and Worcester, and the assigning of such repair work to day and night shifts at the Billerica and Somerville shops.

"A minimum expenditure of $1,450,000 on locomotive terminals should be made during the next two years. Of the road's 1,742 locomotives, 401 should be sold or scrapped.

"Eight hundred coal and 350 refrigerator cars should at once be bought, costing $1,602,000.

BIG CARS ARE FAILURES.

"Conditions in the road's supply department are so utterly bad they cannot be described without an appearance of exaggeration to those who have not seen them. Old and new materials are scattered about without the slightest semblance of order, frequently unprotected from the weather. Excessive stocks of materials and supplies have been kept. Unnecessary expenses have been incurred. Many of Boston & Maine's new 100,000-pound steel cars recently received here have shown failures, some of them failing before they reached the road's rails.

"The contract which Boston & Maine made with the Boston port directors is apparently without legal consideration ,and works a permanent injury to the road. In railroad facilities Commonwealth Pier is distinctly inferior to the Boston & Maine's Mystic Wharf."

Can't Prove Bride; May Deport Girl

Filippo Ballsera is heartbroken because his bride of seventeen is facing deportation at the immigration station on Long wharf, after she had come from Riesa, Italy, to join him. Ballsera, according to the officials, cannot prove the young woman is really married to him.

Fights to See Mayor; Hits Clerk, Arrested

It took two patrolmen on duty at City Hall to eject and arrest a man who was so determined to see Mayor Curley that he assaulted a clerk in the assessing department and attempted to assault Assistant Secretary Dolan.

NO. 23

ATTENTION, MAYOR CURLEY!

If you had made as good a contract for the people of Boston with the Electric Light Company as the City of Pittsburgh, Pa., made with its Electric Light Company, Boston would save about one million and seventy-three thousand dollars during the period of the contract which you wish to foist upon Boston. This great sum saved by the city would give more than ONE THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED AND THIRTY WORKMEN A FULL YEAR'S EMPLOYMENT.

Would you have been elected Mayor, Mr. Curley, if you had told the people of Boston that you considered the 12 per cent. dividends of the Edison Electric Light Company more sacred than the bread and butter of the clerks, the laborers, the police, the firemen, the nurses, the matrons employed by the city, whom you have reduced or discharged, or more sacred than the pleasure and health which the citizens obtain from their parks and public buildings which your FALSE economy tends to cripple?

WEBER-FIELDS WELCOMED TO THE BOSTON

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Old jokes are just as good as new when properly presented, which leads us to Weber and Fields and "Hokey Pokey." It was announced on the program of the Boston Theatre last evening that the entertainment was a "pot-pourri of Weber and Fields' reminiscences in two acts." There was nothing new in "Hokey Pokey" except the faces in the chorus, and, of course, they were young and fresh, and strictly of the 1914 model of musical comedy. Otherwise you traveled back to the days when German comedians choked and strangled in their effort to talk, and kicked, slammed and hit each other in their attempt to be friendly. It was a delightful step into the yesterday of musical comedy.

There was no question about the quality of the greeting extended to Mr. Weber and Mr. Fields, and the first performance was played to the banner audience of the season at the Boston. Everybody laughed at the old gags and gave manifestations of enjoyment at the old scenes. Those whose memories carry them back to the days when the Weber and Fields combination represented the highest standard of musical nonsense and burlesque frivolity will find "Hokey Pokey" a diverting study in the progress of musical shows.

The conspicuous fact of consideration would doubtless be a realization that musical burlesque has not progressed forward to any marked degree since Weber and Fields undertook to dress it up in the silken trimmings of high-class entertainment. "Hokey Pokey" was absurd nonsense from the start, but the absurdities were turned into the most rollicking kind of fun, with the two comedians frisking about in the familiar fashion they have set for themselves. The audience enjoyed the entertainment, which, after all, is the test that counts.

A dignified review of "Hokey Pokey" or of the particular brand of dramatic art that Mr. Weber and Fields represent would be a rather doubtful operation at this late day, yet it may be confessed that even the undignified careless comedy of the piece had merit that could not be denied. The entertainment began nowhere and ended exactly where it started. It was German comedy and girls, musical numbers and girls—and then just girls.

A faint attempt to modernize "Hokey Pokey" was made in the dancing specialties. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy and Mona Desmond and Larry CeBellos brought the one-step into the evening, as well as contributing several other fancy dances.

"Hokey Pokey" was a cheerful affair, with two very cheerful comedians and a hard-working chorus. But the plain facts of the case indicated that the old jokes were just as funny and the old songs just as sweet to the ear as anything of recent manufacture.

Wonderful Views of Animal Kingdom in Ruskin Exhibition

The wonderful possibilities of the motion-picture camera for educational purposes were revealed to Bostonians at the Majestic Theatre last evening by an interesting series of films, depicting the life of wild birds, fish, insects and animals. All of the views were taken "close up," and to obtain them required six years of almost constant labor on the part of John W. Ruskin, who satisfactorily explained the lectures, and his photographers.

Polar bears were shown, swimming; South Africans pythons were revealed in all their voraciousness and African lions and leopards were depicted in search of food.

Pictures were thrown on the screen showing birds in the process of hatching, and interesting phases in the daily lives of snakes, bees, beetles and spiders, were featured. Dozens of other pictures were shown and the great educational value of such an exhibition for the school children could readily be perceived. Mr. Ruskin declared Dr. Cook was the real discoverer of the North Pole.

An English General will probably command the expedition.

Naval Play of Mexico at the Castle Square

The Craig players successfully introduced "The Man-o'-War's Man," a four-act play of the Mexico of today by James W. Harkins, Jr., and Thomas E. Shea, at the Castle Square Theatre last evening and were liberally applauded for their efforts.

The play is up-to-date in that it presents the actual situation in Mexico today. The last two scenes are laid in Vera Cruz.

The hero is a United States naval officer, who is thrown in prison. He finally effects a thrilling escape, overhears a plot against his country while in disguise at a cousned war, and in the end helps valiantly in effecting his country's triumph.

The final scene of the play is set on the roof of the Dilligencia Hotel at Vera Cruz, where Mexican "snipers" are concealed, and sounds of strife are coming up from the streets below.

Mr. Craig, as Captain Jack Conway of the U. S. S. New Orleans, gave a finished performance and delighted his admirers, as he always does. Miss Mary Young, who has been absent from the theatre for some time, took the leading female role as Elinora Denleigh, adopted daughter of Hon. Cyril Denleigh, who is employed in the English diplomatic service.

Other stars who were seen in the most successful performance were Donald Mask, Frederick Ormonde, Walter Walker, Carney Christie, Doris Olsson and Florence Shirley.

Films to Record Tour of the Lambs.

The tour of The Lambs on their Gambol, which began at New York City Friday evening and ends at Boston next Saturday evening, is to be perpetuated on the moving picture film. An enterprising firm of film producers began taking pictures as soon as the rehearsals of the All Star Gambol began in New York weeks ago, and the camera man will follow the Lambs from city to city, taking scenes along the route of parade in the various cities, of the celebrities in the escorts, entraining and detraining of the famous actors and hundreds of other interesting and amusing incidents. As there are more than one hundred theatrical stars in the Gambol, in addition to many well-known writers, artists and composers, and Sousa's Band of Sixty, it is safe to say that no moving picture film ever before made will contain so many celebrities.

Grant Everett Licenses.

The Grant Everett express companies that took the matter of pony express licenses to the Supreme Court and won a decision have been granted licenses by the Everett Aldermen after one of the most exciting sessions in years.

Miller Brothers and Arlington's celebrated 101 Ranch Wild West opened the Boston outdoor theatrical season yesterday with two performances at the old American League ball park, Huntington avenue, to packed houses. At the afternoon performance every seat was sold and at the night show, despite the rain, seats were at a premium.

The show is better than ever. It is wilder, noiser, more sensational and contains more features that are truly characteristic of the West in its palmy days then any exhibition of its kind ever seen here.

The grand introduction, which opens the show, presents to the audience, cowboys, cowgirls, Indians galore, Mexicans and Russian Cossacks, arrayed in their native attire and mounted.

The show this year combines the features presented by others in years gone by and adds new sensations which keep the audience on the verge of excitement and amusement every minute.

The pony express riding, the trick and fancy roping, showing new tricks with the rope, the stage coach holdup, Indian war dances, trick riding and the trap and fancy shooting are all regular entries of a Wild West show, but the auto polo, the dancing horses, boomerang throwing and the lassoing of tall hats while riding at breakneck speed about the arena are sensations that have been left to Miller Brothers and Arlington to bring out.

With this show this season are Edith Tantlinger, the Oklahoma Indian girl, who can shoot with the best shots of the country, and Wenona, another Indian princess, who can ride, rope and shoot with equal skill.

For the first time since the recent trouble with Mexico, genuine Mexicans are shown on exhibition in Boston.

Probe Shooting of Cambridge Youth

Henry J. Cunningham, commissioner of public safety of Cambridge, declares the shooting of seventeen-year-old Ernest Blevin of No. 244 Putnam avenue by Patrolman Daniel O'Brien will be immediately investigated. The youth was shot as the result of his attempt to escape from policemen.

JOAN SAWYER SCORES BIG HIT AT SHUBERT

Miss Joan Sawyer opened her visit to Boston most auspiciously at the Shubert Theatre last night. Her own dances, in which she was assisted by Quentin Tod and Olin Finney, were well received, and the audience went away whistling the strains of the "Maxixe," which concluded the evening's entertainment.

Miss Sawyer's aeroplane waltz was beautifully executed, and the "Three in One" as well. The tango was filled with stage stops.

"The Dance of the Samnum," by Mlle. Renia Barnhan and Charles C. Groh, was a pretty specialty. "Granelle," a sort of pantomime, showed Miss Sawyer and Mr. Tod at their best as solo dancers.

The acting, posing and graceful steps to minuet time, were something new and received merited applause.

"In the Shadows," a special number, with Bee Harnie and Bennie Dixon, brought tremendous applause, as this barefoot couple darted lightly about the stage in a series of difficult steps.

Mlle. Valkyrien in a hunting dance similar to Genee's, made her first appearance since her arrival from Denmark, and Mlle. La Gal danced a French ballet most acceptably.

The audience was greatly interested in the amateur contest, and fourteen couples entered. A new arrangement of allowing the audience to judge by showing their favorites seemed fair. The applause was used to select three couples to dance the final. Mrs. Leona Graucher and Hi G. Barbee of the Back Bay were finally adjudged winners. Miss Augusta E. Conley and James D. McIntyre deserved a place in the final, as their dancing was perfect. Miss Sawyer and Mr. Tod demonstrated the modern dances and showed how they should be adapted to the ballroom.

CLEVER BILL AT B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE WINS

When Dorothy Brenner, the "Lady Dainty of Vaudeville," impersonated "Mamma's Pet" and sang "I'm Not Too Young to Tell What I Know" to an audience that taxed B. F. Keith's Theatre, she drew forth rounds of applause.

Cartrell and Harris, who recently toured Europe and entertained royalty with their unique dancing, introduced the "Brazilian Maxixe," and the "Aviation Dip." "How Hoffmeister Did It," by Bernard Rheinold, assisted by his company of comedians, proved a hit.

The Great Ergotti and his wonderful troupe of Lilliputian acrobats gave a remarkable demonstration. Brown brothers, a quintet of musicians of exceptional talent, were also a feature.

Robinson Newbold and Marie Louise Cribben caught the fancy of the audience by impersonating noted vaudeville artists. Mr. Newbold's impersonation of Raymond Hitchcock was especially good. Fanny Brice, late star of the "Follies," scored a hit with her songs.

Jack and Foris, novelty entertainers, and the moving pictures concluded the program.

When Coffee Gets You—

The experience will be like that of thousands who have ignored the fact that coffee contains a habit-forming drug, caffeine—about 2½ grains to the ordinary cup.

Some say, "Coffee don't hurt me," and seem to get on with it for a time. But there are few persons who can use coffee as a routine daily beverage and not sometime feel its effects—headache, nervousness, indigestion, biliousness, sleeplessness, heart trouble, or some other discomfort.

Thousands have found relief by stopping coffee and using

Instant Postum—a soluble form—requires no boiling—30c and 50c tins.

WOOD ARRAIGNED ON CHARGE OF KILLING TOYMAKER PEASLEE

ing. At a table in front of the Judge sat the attorneys in the case. The rest of the space was taken up by the twenty odd witnesses and about a hundred spectators, seated or standing.

Until Wood appeared the central figures were the two women witnesses, Miss Barnes, the state's star witness, and Mrs. F. L. Osgood, who saw the slayer of the wealthy toymaker.

"IT'S GENE WOOD."

Both women came in an auto with State' Attorney James P. Tuttle of Concord and County Solicitor Robert Murchie. There was a buzz of talk as they entered the hotel. Miss Barnes looking attractive in a blue dress, small dark straw hat and wearing a three-quarter length dark coat. Mrs. Osgood in a prepossessing woman and who wore a becoming dress under a light coat. Behind them sat Morrison and Shirley Peaslee, sons of the murdered man.

At 11:20 there was another stir.

"It's Gene Wood," was whispered around, and in a moment Eugene Wood, erect and looking straight ahead walked in, his wrists in handcuffs. Immediately behind him came Sheriff C. F. Smith. The party halted, and sheriff and prisoner went over to one corner back of a portiere and sat down.

Wood seemed calm, supremely confident. He was not the least bit nervous. His face showed absolute self-possession.

He wore a brown suit and a brown soft felt hat. His face is well tanned. His eyes are dark blue, his hair is dark, and his general appearance is that of a man younger than his forty years.

Murchie, the county solicitor, stood up. Wood glanced toward him. Murchie handed a paper—the complaint—to the Judge. Wood watched it pass from hand to hand. The spectators, with no sound save the rustling of a dress here and there, almost breathlessly watched the silent action. Then the first spoken word came:

"Eugene Wood, stand up."

This was from Judge Sanborn.

Fifteen feet away and Wood. Quickly he stood up. Every eye turned upon him.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

Slowly Judge Sanborn read the complaint. It charged Wood "with the homicide of Howard Peaslee in the town of Henniker on May 22, 1914." Wood's eyes were on the Judge. Never once did his gaze falter.

Then from the judge:

"What do you say to this complaint. Are you guilty or not guilty?"

In a firm, confident voice came Wood's reply:

"Not guilty."

Then Wood sat down. He still looked at the judge; the spectators looked at him.

Judge Sanborn spoke to the county solicitor. Murchie arose.

This tribunal has a limited jurisdiction," he began. "We shall only introduce evidence sufficient to hold the defendant for the October term of the Grand Jury. Therefore we shall not present all our case today."

Murchie called the first witness for the State.

Solicitor Murchie declared that the murder of Mr. Peaslee occurred at 8:45 Friday night, but that the body was not found till the next morning. He then called Constable John E. Marshall, who was the first witness for the government. Mr. Marshall testified:

"I am acquainted with Gene Wood. On Saturday morning at 6 o'clock Dr. Cole of Henniker came to my door and knocked. He told me that Howard Peaslee had been shot, and that I had better come over to see the body. I went with him in an automobile to Mr. Peaslee's home.

"I went into the shed across the road from his house. I entered the door by opening a lock with a key furnished by Morrison Peaslee. I found the body in a rocking chair. He had been shot.

"In this shed were tools and wheels, and ther was a cot bed.

FOUND IN ROCKING CHAIR.

"The Peaslee home is on the highway known as the Ware road. The house is on the north side and the shed where he was found is on the south side.

"He evidently had been writing, and had slumped down in the rocking chair. Ther was a writing tablet in his left hand, and a lead pencil in his right. His right leg was crossed over his left. The rocking chair had a wicker back and seat and flat arms.

"I got there at 6:45. There was a lantern on a stitching horn. It was lighted. There was no oil left in the lantern, for it had been burning all night. It was burning on its wick.

"The dead man's head was tilted toward the lamp and rested on the stitching horn. His hair touched the chimney of the lantern. There were punch holes in the face as if made by shot or a sharp instrument.

"The only person present when I first entered the shed was Dr. Cole. When we reached the place we were met by Morrison Peaslee, the son.

"I examined the window. I found a pane of glass on the right hand lower side of the window on the east side of the building, nearest the road, had been broken. Part of the splintered glass was still in the putty. Some of the glass was scattered on the floor toward the body. There was a stove between the body and the window. The front rig of a fish was also between the body and the window. In the window opposite, behind the body, in the lower sash one of the panes had been punctured as if by a shot. It was in range with the other window.

IDA BARNES' STORY IN PEASLEE MYSTERY

HENNIKER, N. H., May 26.—Miss Ida Barnes, the woman for love of whom Gene Wood, according to the State's charge, shot Howard W. Peaslee, has given the AMERICAN the full story of her acquaintance with both Wood and Peaslee.

It is her first utterance since the murder. She says she had no thought of love for either man. Wood was a "hired man" and nothing more; Peaslee an acquaintance and at times an employe.

"It is true, however," she said, "that Gene Wood was jealous of every man that came to the house, whether it was Mr. Peaslee or some other man. There are many things I might tell, but for the present my lips are sealed."

LAUGHS AT MARRIAGE STORY.

She laughed at the report she was to marry Wood, and explained:

"Reports that I was to marry Gene Wood are absurd. He had no right to think anything of the kind. My relations with him were purely that of an employer to a hired man. Of course I had no control over his notions or sentiments. Village gossips will do that. I cannot and will not cannot account for his thoughts if that is true. I certainly gave him no reason for any such thinking and in justice to myself and my parents I think these stories ought to be stopped. They are malicious and untrue. They are nothing but idle gossip that one hears in a country town."

SAYS WOOD WAS JEALOUS.

"I was curious when I saw in one of the local papers that Gene Wood felt that Mr. Peaslee or anybody else had interfered with any of his plans about marriage or anything else so far as I was concerned.

"It is true, however, that he was jealous of every man who came to our house, whether it was Mr. Peaslee or any new hired man. There are many matters which I might tell, but my lips are sealed now. I think my position should be explained though, at this time.

"Why should I think of marrying a man of the stamp of Gene Wood? I simply tried to be kind to him while he worked about the place. My parents were considerate of him also, but he did not know how to appreciate it.

"Wood worked for us about a year and was practically a member of the household. He left of his own accord on April 17. It is not true that we discharged him. He had a quick temper and was cross with different men who worked here.

"He flared up over something which I cannot discuss now and left suddenly. He had done this twice before. When he came back the third time he was so ugly we told him that so long as he left he might as well stay away and he did.

FRIENDS MANY YEARS.

"Mr. Peaslee, who was murdered, was a frequent visitor at our house, but my dealings with him were entirely of a business nature. He did a great deal of work for me. Whenever I had haying done on the farms Mr. Peaslee took the contract and furnished men and horses.

"His son also helped before Shirley went away.

"I have property and considerable business interests and have to deal with many men. My attitude toward Howard Peaslee was purely that of a friend. We had known him for more than fourteen years. We knew his folks.

"His parents were Quakers in Ware. That is why my parents and I were so close to Mr. Peaslee. I wish to put a stop to these stories about love and courtship.

"I sincerely hope that the murder of Mr. Peaslee will be avenged. I hope the State will punish the guilty person, and I think all ought to do their share in supplying information."

The funeral of Howard W. Peaslee, the victim, takes place this afternoon. The local order of the Knights of Pythias, with which he was prominently identified, will conduct the services in the Methodist Church. The Rev. E. B. Young will officiate and Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Morrison will sing. The body will be buried in the new cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Barnes, parents of Ida Barnes, talked with an AMERICAN reporter today. Mrs. Barnes said:

"These stories about my daughter are silly. Why should a woman of the standing and intelligence of Ida select such a man as Gene Wood if she thought of marriage? We tried to treat Wood with consideration, but he had an ungovernable temper at times.

"I saw that Gene thought a great deal of Ida, although she gave him no encouragement. He was apt to misjudge kindliness. If he had any matrimonial intentions he has only himself to blame.

THREATENED DAUGHTER.

"I slept comfortably the first night after I heard he was arrested. I feared he might lose his temper and do some violence to my daughter.

"I know he was prowling around here after he left in April, because I often heard the dog bark at night. I felt certain who was outside the house."

Walter Barnes, father of the girl, said:

"The cows got out and drifted down to the Common one day in April and Wood drove them back into the barn. My daughter heard him beating the cows. She told him to stop. He rushed at her with an ox whip uplifted but did not strike her.

"My daughter said to him: 'Gene Wood stop beating those cows.' We don't keep them for that.' He was mad and I'm not, but I'm not afraid of you.'

Two Parties Promised Convention to Revise the State Constitution

Progressives and Democrats having promised the people of Massachusetts a non-partisan Convention, for the purpose of considering amendments to the Constitution, the House of Representatives passed a bill providing for such an assembly. The Republican majority on the Committee on Ways and Means has reported, ostensibly on the grounds of expense, that the bill "ought not to pass." This report will be acted upon in the House on Thursday. In view of the great importance of the project the AMERICAN today reproduces the Constitutional Convention planks from the Progressive and the Democratic platforms, together with paragraphs from the inaugural address of Governor Walsh:

DEMOCRATS:

A Constitutional Convention should be held at once, for the purpose of engrafting into our fundamental law those additions and corrections which modern conditions render desirable.—Platform of the Massachusetts Democrats, Fall Campaign, 1913.

PROGRESSIVES:

To the end that necessary changes in our form of Government be made with due deliberation, we demand the convening of a non-partisan Constitutional Convention.—Platform of the Massachusetts Progressives, Fall Campaign, 1913.

THE GOVERNOR:

I recommend that the Legislature cause to be assembled, with the consent of the electorate, a body of citizens, who shall be selected without party designation, to formulate amendments to our Constitution which, submitted to the voters of the State, will tend to settle otherwise irrepressible controversies, and will make our Constitution conform more nearly to the needs and to the public opinion of the day.—Governor Walsh in his Address to the two Branches of the Legislature, January 8, 1914.

"I'VE NO AMBITION TO BE PRESIDENT," VILLA TELLS THE AMERICAN

me. Do the same to any one else who tries what I tried. What I want is that you look after my family. My property is owned jointly by myself and a cousin. He had more influence than my wife. I wish you would see that Mrs. Benton receives her due share."

The general sighed. "Truly Benton was a man. He was brave. I wanted to spare him, but it would not have been right in view of what he attempted. But I hate to kill brave men."

"And Mrs. Benton?" I inquired. "Have you heard from her?"

"Yes; only last week I authorized her to ship out her cattle. I know that all the cattle on the Benton ranch are not hers. Some were placed there for safekeeping by people who feared confiscation of their property. But, according to my promise to Benton, I did not wish to make difficulties and I authorized her to ship all."

NO HIGHER AMBITION.

"Well, General," I said, "I have known you as an outlaw, a colonel, a general and a generalissimo. How far up are you going? Will I soon have to address you as Mr. President-"

"No," he answered, "I have no aspirations. I will go back to work as soon as we drive out that drunkard, Huerta."

He warmed then into his self-defence. "I am only a poor man," he continued. "I only wish to see my countrymen freed from tyranny. I am a patriot. Yet I am the man whom they call the bandit Villa. If I wanted money I could be the richest man in the world, for I have walked amid gold, silver and jewels. All could have been mine for the taking, but I did not want it and I have used it for the army and for the cause. I defy anyone to show that I have any put away for myself."

Villa then praised the Washington administration and President Wilson. "He is the greatest man of the time," he stated. "He has been a true friend to Mexico.

"So have you been a good friend to Americans here," I ventured.

"I should I not be?" was the reply. "There are two reasons why we should be friendly to the United States. One is that Americans have helped us greatly. The other is that they are immeasurably stronger than we."

"But suppose Huerta forces a war?" I asked.

PERDITION OF BOTH.

"That would be perdition of both Mexico and the United States," replied. "For though we are but rain beside the United States, our men are very persistent and can live on nothing, and it would cost much time, money and men to conquer us. But there is no reason for such a war and it will not be."

"What are your plans, general?" I enquired. "Will you move southward from here?"

"No. This is not my territory," he answered. "I will return soon to Torreon. The railroad has been repaired southward from there almost as far as Zacatecas and I will probably take that route to Mexico City. Here I am needed." The division of the Northeast should be able to handle San Luis Potosi, and all Federal garrisons north of Queretaro. There we will meet and plan the taking of Mexico City.

"Do you anticipate any more big battles?"

"No, they are afraid and will probably not stand up to us again."

"What do you do with prisoners that you take in battle?"

"I kill the old officers and spare the young ones, who are fighting just out of excess virility and do not yet realize the responsibility of citizenship. The rank and file I set at liberty or enroll in my army. They are not enemies. They serve Huerta by force and desert to me whenever they have an opportunity."

SILLIMAN SAFE UNDER AMERICAN FLAG AT VERA CRUZ

VERA CRUZ, May 26.—John R. Silliman, United States vice consul at Saltillo, who was arrested by Federals and held in jail with threats of death hanging over his head, arrived here today from Mexico City, having been liberated by General Huerta.

"I cannot talk of my experiences until I consult Consul W. W. Canada and Arnold Shanklin, the American consul to Mexico City," said Silliman. "All I can say now is that I feel mighty glad to get under the protection of the Stars and Stripes."

U. S. Aviators Must Keep Within Lines

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The United States has given assurances that no more American aeroplanes would sail across Mexican lines and Vera Cruz as long as hostilities are suspended. This was determined as a consequence of the Mexican Federals firing upon one of the navy aeroplanes when it sailed over a Federal outpost.

HOME RULE VICTORY CELEBRATED; PLAN TO CONCILIATE ULSTER

LONDON, May 26.—Parades and bonfires in many sections of Ireland greeted the final passage of the Home Rule bill by the House of Commons. John E. Redmond declares the bill "a new charter of liberty for Ireland." In no section of Ireland were there any hostile demonstrations.

Great enthusiasm was aroused in Cork. Bands paraded, and the streets were illuminated with torches and blazing barrels.

Dublin, Londonderry and Belfast were all quiet.

The fight on the bill in the House of Lords will begin the middle of June, but, as Mr. Redmond points out, the measure is as good as law now. Certain portions of the bill go into effect as soon as it is signed by the King.

LEADERS CONGRATULATED.

The House of Lords has already read the bill formally a first time. Whatever the action of the Lords, the bill goes to King George when they are done.

Irish Nationalist leaders are jubilant over the culmination of the long struggle. Messages of congratulation are pouring in on them from all quarters of the world.

Sir Courtenay Ilbert, the venerable clerk of the House of Commons, bound the Irish Home Rule bill in green ribbon last night and took it to the House of Lords for the third and last time. A group of jubilant Nationalists escorted the official bearer of the bill, singing "God Save Ireland."

"A NATION ONCE AGAIN."

Irish Nationalists, Liberals and Laborites, tramped in serrid ranks after the black-robed, bewigged official, giving voice to their jubilation in cheers, in which the public scattered along the corridors joined. Some Irish onlookers broke forth in song with the hitherto only hopeful, now the realized, melody of "A Nation Once Again."

The only question that remains is to find some method of conciliating the Ulster Unionists, who have been threatening "civil war" if home rule were forced on them. This Premier Asquith will do in a so-called "amendment bill" which he will soon present to Parliament.

"We believe the bill is a good, workable bill, and that it is the charter of liberty for the Irish people.

"I express the most earnest hope that now, when every one in Ulster, as elsewhere in Ireland, has to face the indisputable fact of Home Rule and a Home Rule Parliament, those of our fellow-countrymen who are genuinely nervous as to their position will abandon unreasonable demands and enter into a conciliatory discussion with their fellow-countrymen upon the points of the bill upon which they would desire further safeguards.

"I say, on behalf of the Nationalists of Ireland, that we desire their cooperation and friendship and appeal to them in all parts of Ireland to join hands with us in making the Home Rule settlement one that will ensure the prosperity and the freedom of all classes in the country.

"The great thing for us to remember is, that amending bill or no amending bill, the Home Rule bill is now practically an act of Parliament."

REDMOND HAILS NEW CHARTER OF LIBERTY

LONDON, May 26.—"The cause of famine, insurrections and bloodshed and the disloyalty of the Irish people throughout the whole world is dead and its place is to be taken by a new union, founded on mutual respect and will, between the two islands, and to be followed, I firmly believe, by a history of peace, prosperity and loyalty," John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader declared today in discussing Home Rule.

"The division in the House marks the death, after an inglorious history of 144 years, of the union of Pitt and Castlereagh. That union was the cause of Ireland's poverty, misery, depopulation and demoralization.

"There are only two eventualities —and both are impossible—which could possibly prevent the bill actually becoming a statute in a few weeks' time. The first is that the present session of Parliament should come to an abrupt end before one month from this date, an utterly unthinkable proposition.

"The other is that the House of Commons should suddenly go mad and pass a resolution to the effect that the bill should not be presented for the royal assent. In the absence of these two absurd contingencies the bill must automatically become a law.

"It is impossible to forget the exact of Parliament."

traordinary odds against which we have been fighting for the last two years, and especially for the last six months. We have had the entire power, wealth and secret influence of the aristocracy of this country opposed to us.

BOSTON FRIENDS OF IRELAND ARE JUBILANT

Boston friends of Ireland rejoiced with her today in the Home Rule bill victory and predicted a great era of prosperity as the result of the culmination of the long struggle.

Among prominent persons to express an opinion were:

GOVERNOR WALSH—The dignity and restraint with which the leaders of the Irish Nationalists conducted their campaign during the recent months is abundant proof of the capacity of the Irish people to govern themselves.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR BARRY—The passage of the bill marks an epoch in the world's history. Emmet's epitaph can now be written. His country at once takes its place among the nations of the earth. The words that wrung from John Boyle O'Reilly's heart are gone.

MAYOR CURLEY—Every lover of liberty the world over rejoices at the news that home rule for Ireland is a reality.

MICHAEL J. JORDAN, national secretary of the United Irish League of America—It is impossible to forecast the enormous and beneficial results that will accrue not only to Ireland but to England.

T. B. FITZPATRICK, national treasurer of the United Irish League of America—Mr. Redmond and the great men who have stood by him, together with the Liberal party and the prime minister, deserve the warmest commendations from all who love liberty.

EX-MAYOR FITZGERALD—It is another milestone in the march of humanity. While Irishmen are naturally pleased, lovers of freedom everywhere rejoice. The question settled means better understanding between Englishmen and Irishmen all over the world. All praise to those members of the British Parliament who have brought about the aspiration of the Irish race for centuries.

DR. JAMES T. GALLAGHER—I am overwhelmed with joy. I believe that the home rule bill is a fair measure of justice; government for Ireland.

MICHAEL MAYNES—All hats off to the two great parliamentarians, Prime Minister Asquith and John E. Redmond. The greatest achievement of the world's history has come at last to final victory.

HUGH OSBORNE—All friends of England and Ireland must rejoice.

Attacks England's Position on Tolls

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Declaring the forces of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was nullified by the fact that Great Britain had recognized that when change in sovereignty takes place no treaties are binding, Senator Jones of Washington, in the Senate today, opposed the Panama Canal tolls repeal bill.

"England invoked this rule in her own defence when she was accused by the European powers with violation of the neutrality provisions of the Sues Canal convention," said Senator Jones.

Files Answer to Mrs. Siegel's Claim

NEW YORK, May 26.—The H. S. Realty Company has filed its answer to an action by Mrs. Marie V. Siegel to set aside the conveyance of property to the company. The property belonged to Henry Siegel and his wife signed away her dower interests, she alleges, upon false representations. The realty company admits Henry Siegel once owned the property but denies Mrs. Siegel's interest.

FAIRY STORY BY GIRL SUING HOE FOR $225,000

NEW YORK, May 26.—Like a fairy tale was the story of Mae Sullivan, a girl of twenty, who is suing Arthur L. Hoe for $225,000 for breach of promise.

Hoe is the son and heir of the late Robert Hoe, the printing press manufacturer. Miss Sullivan told an amazing story of how Hoe showered her with money, "hundreds of dollars every time he called," and once as much as $10,000 in $1,000 bills. She claimed she was blackmailed and robbed of thousands by a couple with whom she lived.

"Mr. Hoe finally told me," she said, "that he was trying to have me committed as insane. He said he would pay $1,500 a week to keep me in an asylum, rather than pay me $1,000 a week as he had promised."

MET ON THE STREET.

She began with her first meeting with Hoe, on Fifth avenue. She said:

"I was seventeen years old at the time, had on short dresses and wore my hair down my back. Mr. Hoe asked me if he had not met me at Atlantic City. I said I thought not, but he told me his full name and asked if he might call to see me.

"The following day we met by appointment at the Hotel Astor. He told me I was very beautiful and that he loved me. He said he had inherited $8,000,000 from his father, and that if I would marry him he would give me every luxury."

Q.—Did you accept Mr. Hoe's proposal of marriage? A.—I did.

"At the Astor the following day I saw Mr. Hoe again and he gave me five $100 bills."

RENTED APARTMENT.

Q.—Did you ask him for money? A.—I did not. I never asked him for money, except later when I was in need of funds to meet living expenses. He proposed that I rent an apartment and he would furnish it.

Q.—Did you rent an apartment with which to buy an automobile? A.—He did. Mr. Stade persuaded me to give him the $5,000, after which he sent me a car, for which he said he paid $6,500. Later I learned Mr. Stade had paid only $2,000 for the automobile.

Q.—Where was it Mr. Hoe gave you that $8,000? A.—At the Fiftieth street station of the subway. We used to meet there often. On one other occasion he gave me $10,000 in $1,000 bills.

Move for Recall of Judge Lindsey

DENVER, May 26.—The Law and Order League of Denver has started a petition for the recall of Judge Ben B. Lindsey because of his attitude in the Colorado strike situation. An interview credited to him in Chicago, coupled with his representations to President Wilson, forms the basis of the proposed recall.

ROOSEVELT AT CAPITAL; CALLS UPON WILSON

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will have little opportunity for a breathing spell during the eight hours and forty minutes that he will be here this afternoon and tonight. Plans have been made by the ex-President's friends to give him an enthusiastic reception when he arrives at 3:29 p. m. and from that time to midnight when he leaves he will be busy.

Though great interest attaches to the visit that the colonel will make to the White House, this is overshadowed by the conference that the former President will have with his Progressive lieutenants. At this he will be given much information that will be of value in mapping out his Fall campaign.

While his visit here primarily was for a lecture before the National Geographic Society on his recent discoveries in the wilds of Brazil, much political significance was attached to it. Party lines were not drawn so far as the spectators were concerned, Republicans, Progressives and Democrats all being eager to see the militant colonel.

Just as the Colonel was about to board his train in New York a young man wearing pearl-colored spats, an oxford coat and a hat with a yellow feather in it rushed up and extended his hand.

"I am overwhelmed to meet you, Colonel," said the young man.

The Colonel seized the outstretched hand, giving it a grip that made the young man wince.

"I'm always glad to meet a native-born citizen," said the ex-President. The young man then pulled a green, red and lavender necktie from his pocket, begging the Colonel to accept it as a gift. Colonel Roosevelt eyed it for a moment, then politely declined.

Arthur W. Moors, Boston Banker, to Wed Virginia Fisher

B. Moors & Co., who lives at No. 171 Beacon street. The wedding is to be held on June 6, at noon in the Arlington Street Church, and is expected to be attended by only relatives and close friends.

Moors is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Moors, and is a Harvard man of the class of '86. With his brother, Francis J. Moors, he controls the Moors & Cabot house. His brother is John F. Moors of the Finance Commission.

Correct Way to Treat Skin Diseases

Both air and water seem to have a bad effect upon skin diseases like Eczema, of which there are many forms. Keeping out the water and air is the first thing to do. By using Cadum, the well-known remedy for skin diseases, air and water are excluded, because Cadum contains petrolatum and white wax, and these form a tight covering over the sore places upon the skin. Cadum also contains oil of cade, which has been successfully used many years by the medical profession in the treatment of Eczema and other skin trouble. If your skin is inflamed, irritated or sore, get a 10c box of Cadum of your druggist and try it. The 10c size contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size and is cheaper to buy.

LIPTON'S NEW CUP DEFENDER IS LAUNCHED

GOSPORT, England, May 25.—The yacht Shamrock IV., with which Sir Thomas Lipton will try to lift the America's cup, was successfully launched here today. Sir Thomas brought a large party upon his steam yacht Erin and all were enthusiastic over the prospects of the challenger.

About 200 notables witnessed the launching of the Shamrock IV., including William Marconi, inventor of the wireless telegraph. As the challenger slid down the ways she ranged near the Victory, the famous flagship of Lord Nelson, and photographers who were busy snapping the sight caught both vessels in some of their pictures.

Cheers greeted the new craft as she glided into the water of Gosport Harbor. Sir Thomas being one of the most enthusiastic of all the spectators.

Elaborate precautions had been taken by the police to prevent militant suffragettes from marring the occasion.

The Shamrock IV. was christened by the Countess of Shaftesbury, who stood upon a flag-draped platform at the port bow. As a souvenir of the occasion Sir Thomas presented the Countess with an elaborate diamond and emerald brooch. Small pins of gold shamrocks were given to the guests as souvenirs.

Although the breeze was light, the Shamrock IV. showed a fast pair of heels. She indicated, however, that she would be difficult to handle in boisterous weather.

Mystery Cup Yacht Vanitie in Early City Island Trip

NEW LONDON, Ct., May 26.—The cup yacht Vanitie and her consorts sailed for City Island early today as quietly and mysteriously as she arrived yesterday.

The racer's trip here was unexpected, but it was not long before scores of spectators were on hand to get a line on the craft, which anchored off the New York Yacht Club's station.

The steamer City of Stamford, which had comfortable quarters for the Vanitie's crew, also arrived with the sloop.

The auxiliary brigantine-rigged yacht Mohican, owned by Alexander S. Cochran, owner of the Vanitie, was also here with Mr. Cochran and family on board.

Captain Jannis gave the sloop a three-hours' trial spin off the mouth of the harbor late in the afternoon.

WILEY TO SEE RIVAL BIKER RACE TONIGHT

RACING PROGRAM.

Leon Didier and Elmer Collins, motor pace heat match.
Freddy Hill, Joe Fogler and Frank Cavanagh, sprint race.
Turville and Luden, special motorcycle race.

A motor paced race, a sprint match, and a motorcycle contest will be offered as the first mid-week attraction of the season at the Revere cycle track tonight.

Leon Didier, the French champion, who did such splendid work in his first race here on Saturday night last, will meet Elmer Collins, the Lynn star, in a match motor paced race.

Collins is out to take the Frenchman's measure, but, judging by the speed that the latter showed against Carmen and Root, it looks as though Collins would have his hands full.

George Wiley, the world champion race follower, will be a spectator at the race, having made a special trip here from his home in Syracuse, for the purpose of seeing Didier, of whom he has heard so much of late.

Joe Fogler, Freddy Hill and Frank Cavanagh, a trio of America's best short distance hikers, will meet in the three-cornered sprint match race. Hill, who has not appeared at the Beach oval in several seasons, has been doing splendid work this Spring, and a crowd will be on hand to give the local star a welcome.

The third feature of the night will be a special motorcycle race between Charley Turville and Carl Iluden. There are no two men better known at the Revere track, and they are sure to send their machines around at a terrific pace.

The regular amateur and professional races will, as usual, have many local boys in them.

Leland Downs Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 26.—Leland Stanford's team defeated Yale 2 to 1. The Californians captured both matches in the singles by brilliant playing. Yale took the match in the doubles in three sets.

WALTER CAMP EXPLAINS RULES OF TRACK FOR STADIUM GAMES

Written for the Boston American
By WALTER CAMP.

Even if you hapen to be sitting next to an enthusiast in track and field games, it is more than likely that if you asked him what the diameter of the steel wire, which forms the handle of the hammer, must be, he might be unable to tell you. Possibly he might even have difficulty in telling you the width of the joint from which the jumpers take their spring.

At any rate, in going to the Intercollegiates at the Harvard Stadium next Friday and Saturday, it will enhance the pleasure of any spectator to be posted on a number of points of this nature.

The hammer, which was originally, of course, a weight on a wooden handle, is now a little sphere into which is fastened a wire handle, the diameter of the wire being not less than one-eighth of an inch. It usually has a loop grip, but that loop grip must be of rigid construction.

The length of the complete implement, head and wire, shall not be more than four feet, and its weight not less than sixteen pounds. The circle from which the thrower must take his throw is seven feet in diameter, bounded by a metal or wooden ring, sunk almost flush with the ground.

SHOT AND COVER 16 POUNDS.

The shot is a little sphere with a covering of any material. The combined weight of the shot and its cover, if a cover is used, must be sixteen pounds. Here again a circle, seven feet in diameter, with a metal or wooden ring marking it, governs the position of the man's feet in making his put, but this ring is divided into halves by a line drawn through the centre.

In the middle of this circumference of the front half is placed a stop board, four feet long and four inches high, firmly fastened in the ground. The feet of the competitor may rest against but not on top of this board. It is a foul if part of the person of the competitor touches the top of the stop board, the circle or the ground outside.

The measurement of a track is taken eighteen inches from the inner edge of the track, except in straightaway tracks, where the distance is measured in a straight line from the starting mark to the finishing line.

No competitor may cross in front of another to the inner edge of the track in races that take in a turn, unless he is at least six feet in advance of his nearest competitor, and after turning the last corner into the straight each competitor must keep in a straight course to the finishing line, and not cross either to the outside or inside in front of any of his opponents.

TEN HURDLES IN 120 YARDS.

The hurdles in the 120-yard race are ten in number, and each is three feet six inches high.

They are placed ten yards apart—the first hurdle fifteen yards from the starting line and the last hurdle fifteen yards from the finishing line. In the low hurdles, 220 yards, the hurdles are two feet six inches high, placed twenty yards apart, with the first hurdle twenty yards from the start and the last hurdle twenty yards from the finish.

The standard broad jump requires a joist eight inches wide, sunk flush with the earth, and the outer edge of which is called the "scratch" and the measurement is taken from this outer edge at right angles to the nearest break in the ground made by any part of the person of the competitor. It is a foul if any part of the competitor's foot is over the scratch line in taking off.

In the pole vault, the poles must have no assisting devices, but may be coated or wrapped in order to get a firm grasp and may have one spike at the lower end.

The poles are unlimited as to size and weight, and a competitor may be allowed to dig a hole where he places his pole, provided that hole is not more than one foot in diameter.

CASCADILLA WINS GREAT SCHOOL RACE

The strong crew of the Cascadilla School of Ithaca, N. Y., with a great spurt in the last quarter mile, today defeated the eight of Stone School by a length and a half. Exnerts who viewed the race declared it was one of the greatest schoolboy rowing contests ever held.

The New York crew finished the mile and 550-yard course in 6 minutes 57 2-5 seconds, with the losing eight just eight seconds in the rear.

The crews took the starting line in the best possible shape for a race and both boats set a high stroke at the start. The Stone School began with close to forty-five to the minute, with the Cascadilla coxswain ordering forty strokes to the minute from his husky oarsmen.

STONE LED AT THE START.

The race started off Fairfield street, and when the bridge was reached about three-quarters of a mile down the river, the Stone crew was leading and rowing a pretty stroke that carried the boat at a quick and steady straight line from the starting mark to the finishing line.

No competitor may cross in front of another to the inner edge of the track in races that take in a turn, unless he is at least six feet in advance of his nearest competitor, and after turning the last corner into the straight each competitor must keep in a straight course to the finishing line, and not cross either to the outside or inside in front of any of his opponents.

OUIMET AND TRAVERS WIN FRENCH GOLF

PARIS, May 26.—Americans played in excellent form at the opening of the French amateur golf championship on the links of the Societe de la Bouile at Versailles today. Nearly all won by large margins.

Lord Charles Hope, the present title holder, was also a victor in the first round of play, defeating his opponent, Godfrey, by 3 up and 2 to play.

Francis Ouimet, fresh from his defeat at Sandwich, played up to his reputation as open champion of the United States, beating J. S. Worthington by 3 up and 6 to play.

TRAVERS WINS HIS MATCH.

Jerome D. Travers of Montclair, N. J., amateur golf champion of the United States, beat Charles Radcliffe by 5 up and 4 to play.

Fraser Hale of Chicago bested W. A. Vangliano by 8 up and 7 to play. Harold Weber of Toledo, O., defeated F. Ruffer by 4 up and 5 to play.

Arthur G. Lockwood of the Belmont Springs Country Club, Massachusetts, former amateur champion of Massachusetts, was defeated by C. A. Palmer, ex-champion of Ireland, by 3 up and 2 to play.

BIG GALLERIES THERE.

The weather was good and large galleries followed the players, particularly the Americans. A number of American tourists motored out from Paris. The course is heavily grassed and is set off with a heavy background of trees. Another note of picturesqueness was added by the boy scout uniforms of the caddies.

School Tennis Battle.

The Huntington School and Wakefield high tennis teams open their season today. Coach Sexton has picked the following team to represent the Back Bay private school: R. Jackson, Cameron, Odgen, E. Jewell, A. Taylor and A. Dalby.

Splendid Remedy For Eczema
Also for Salt Rheum, Acne, Tetter, Psoriasis and Other Skin Troubles.

After using S. S. S. for a while, the characteristic marks of all skin troubles change completely. When eczema has begun to disappear, the lower skin loses its power to divert impurities and thus they continue to gather in the weak spots or those already attacked. The action of S. S. S. is directly on eczema, and this fact has been demonstrated time and time again as by the most severe forms of weeping eczema.

Its influence in the glands where the tiny arteries transfer the red blood for the worn-out blood to the veins is quite remarkable and goes on constantly with every tick of the clock—the best of the heart.

And new skin is thus caused to form while the germs and disintegrating influences that cause eczema are scattered and their harmful parts completely suppressed.

S. S. S. has a wonderful tonic influence in the blood because it contains no "dope" is entirely free of any mineral drugs or any other drugs except the remarkable medicinal effect of the pure vegetable products of which it is made.

Few people realize how harmful are many of the strong, crude ointments that used to be in favor before they learned that S. S. S. is safe, speedy and sure. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S. Give it a good trial and you will soon see a decided improvement in any form of skin trouble. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 158 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for special free advice and new book on skin or blood trouble.

Bill Watkins Stays Only Four Rounds with Sam Langford

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 26.—Bill Watkins lasted less than four rounds of his bout at the Olympic Athletic Club with Sam Langford, the Boston Tar Baby.

Watkins proved best as a hugger, but Langford fought him off in the fourth. Drawing back his left, he landed a hook to the jaw and Bill went sailing to his corner, from which he refused to be nursed back to the centre of the ring. The referee declared Bill out of the running.

OTHER BOUTS.

AT LONDON—Young Ahearn of Brooklyn knocked out "Private" Braddock in the eighth round in their bout before the National Sporting Club here.

At the Blackfriars ring Jim Savage, American, defeated Patrick Curran, an English heavyweight, on points in a twenty-round engagement.

AT PHILADELPHIA—Dan Dailey of New Castle, Pa., was saved from a probable knockout in his bout here with Jim Coffey, the Dublin giant, when the bell came to his rescue in the final round.

Record Penn Squad for Stadium Meet

PHILADELPHIA, May 26.—There will be thirty-five of the University of Pennsylvania track team sent to Cambridge for the intercollegiate championships, as announced by Coach Orton, the greatest number of athletes ever entered by Pennsylvania for the annual meet.

The size of the squad is explained by the new system of scoring, which allows a point for fifth place in each event. The athletes, accompanied by the manager, coach and trainers, will leave here Thursday morning.

TITUS PREDICTS CORNELL SWEEP OVER HARVARD

By CONSTANCE S. TITUS,
America's Foremost Amateur Oarsman.

In this afternoon's big dual race between the Cornell and Harvard crews I would not be surprised to see the record broken if conditions are favorable. Both crews are very fast and Harvard has made great preparations for this event.

In fact, for the last four or five years Harvard has done everything in its power to try to beat Cornell, and this looks the best chance the Crimson ever had. They are on their own home water, and being very used to it is a great deal in their favor, as this is the hardest water to row on I have ever seen. The back wash of the waves from the new wall keeps the water dancing around in a short choppy sea.

Cornell went out twice yesterday. In the morning every man in the crew complained of the water, saying it was the hardest they had ever rowed in. But the Ithacans got through it remarkably well, with a long, clean stroke. They reach out very well and pull all the way through to the body.

Again late in the afternoon they tried the water, and both the varsity and freshman crews got over the lumpsy water much better, especially at the finish of the stroke. It was very noticeable how they had improved, as the blades came out very cleanly. If Cornell could have three or four days' rowing on this course it would greatly improve their chances.

PREDICT HARD RACE.

I think it will be a very hard race from start to finish. Harvard surely will lead Cornell at the beginning of the race, as they row a much higher stroke, but the Crimson boat does not travel as well between strokes. They seem to be doing a good deal of the work after the pin.

The Harvard body swing is not quite as long as that of Cornell and they sit up more erect in the shell. Their stroke does not seem to be as powerful as that of the Ithacans, and I would not be a bit surprised to see Harvard row herself out in the first mile.

Assistant Coach John H. Hoyle, who is with the crew from Ithaca, is wise to Harvard's tactics, and he will not let his crew burn it up at the beginning, but he will give them instructions "not to let Harvard get too much of a lead in the first part of the race." There is no question in my mind that three victories will be brought back to Ithaca by the Cornell varsity, Cornell freshmen and Cascadilla School crews.

Cornell's freshmen have a wonderful, powerful crew, although they need a great deal of polishing off Hoyle is having trouble again this year with the bow man. No. 2 is very slow in getting his hands away, and before his oar gets over his knees reaching out, he starts sliding up for the next stroke. In rough water the blade of his oar will dig in on the water and retard the boat.

BOW MAN SHOWS DEFECT.

The bow man at times allows his body to move like an oar and the break in his oars is too quick, but the bow seat is a very hard seat to row from, especially for a freshman. No. 7 has a hard job just as he catches the water he slips his hand away from the end of the oar about three inches losing three inches of leverage on his stroke

The make-up of Cornell's varsity crew will be the same as last Saturday—Bow, Libbe; No. 2, Duffie; No. 3, Eddy; No. 4, Gilman; No. 5, Wellington; third; No. 7, O'Brien; stroke, Sprang; coxswain, Rand.

Second—Stroke, Lund; No. 7, Curran; No. 6 Parsons; No. 5, Schall; No. 4, Harwood, No. 3, Soucy; No. 2, Talcott; bow, Reynolds; coxswain, Sargent.

Who's Who in the Big Crews That Race Today on Charles

HARVARD

C. C. LUND, '16, strokes his first varsity race today. He was coxswain on the freshmen four last year. "Chick" dabbled in scholastic affairs at Country Day school before being drafted into big learning circles. He is one of the three Boston boys on the eight. He weighs 167 pounds and is nineteen years old and 6 feet tall.

* * *

L. CURTIS, JR., '14, "Looloo" drives his oar at No. 7. Curtis rowed against Cornell last year, but lost out for a place in the eight for the Yale race. He is a Boston boy and prepared at Groton. He is twenty-two years old, 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 176 pounds.

* * *

B. G. PARSON, '16. will be best known in the future if Harvard defeats Cornell today, as the foster father of "Happy Days," the new Harvard English collie mascot. Parson rows at No. 6. He prepared at the Hope Street High School, Providence. Parson tempts the scales at 188 pounds, is 6 feet 2 inches tall and is twenty years old.

* * *

C. F. SCHALL, '14, the "Spider" is a New York youngster and the "funny" man of the crew. He is one of the five men in the boat who rowed in the eight that defeated Cornell 1916 last Spring. Schall is a St. Paul School boy, is 6 feet 3 inches, weighs 190, is the tallest lad in the entire squad and rows at No. 5.

* * *

S. HARWOOD, '15, rowed in the four-oared crew that beat Yale last June. He stroked the eight against Cornell last season. He is a Newton boy and prepared at Middlesex. If he rows against Yale again as he did last June he will be the next Harvard captain. Harwood is twenty-one years old, weighs 178 pounds and is 6 feet 2 inches.

* * *

F. W. SOUCY, '15, rows at No. 3. Soucy is the real find of Harvard varsity rowing this year. He is the crew's strong man. The "little giant," the shortest member of the eight, earned his first major "H" playing centre in the football game with Yale last November. He is a Bostonian and prepared at Latin School. He is twenty-one years old, weighs 176 pounds and is 5 feet 11 inches.

* * *

J. TALCOTT, '16, is another New Yorker on the squad and his place is at No. 2. Talcott rowed in a similar position on the freshmen crew last year. He is the lightest man in the shell, weighing 165 pounds. He dug an enough knowledge at Cloyne school, New York, to make Harvard. He started growing to his present 6 feet twenty years ago.

* * *

C. REYNOLDS, '14, is the Harvard captain and is seated at bow. "Babe" is the only engaged man on the squad and will be married this Summer. He is an Andover man and comes from Montclair, N. J. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 167 pounds and twenty-four years make him the oldest man in the boat.

* * *

E. M. SARGENT, '16, was not even a third string freshmen rower last year. He got his chance this Spring when Gallagher resigned his seat following a race at Annapolis. He is a 125 pounder, but runs a couple of miles daily to keep down to that limit. "Tommy" is a Stone School boy and his home is in Brookline.

CORNELL

B. C. SPRANSY, 14, is stroke in the Cornell eight. He is serving his third year in rowing harness under Courtney. Spransy is the second oldest man in the boat, being twenty-four. He is one of the three 185 pounders squatted in the craft and is a giant, 6 feet 1 inch in height

* * *

J. E. O'BRIEN, '15, came from Shortsville, Ohio, to cast his fortunes with Cornell rowing. He had prepared at the local high school. "Ohie" is twenty-two, is 5 feet 11½ inches and weighs 165 pounds. He rows at No. 7.

* * *

E. S. BIRD, '14, who rows at No. 6, is twenty-four years old, 6¾ feet in height and tickles the Fahrnanize at 172 pounds. Bird comes from New York city, where he prepared at Dwight Clinton High School. This is his first year in the varsity craft.

* * *

R. WELLES, '16, at No. 5, is one of the three men in the shell who were defeated by the Crimson freshman last season. "Russ" is seeking to make Harvard do penance today. He is twenty-two years old, looks down on ordinary mortals from a height of 6 feet 1½ inches. Russell weighs 185 pounds. He is a native of Norwich, Ct., and prepared at Cheshire School.

* * *

A. R. GILMAN, '15, is considered by Coach Courtney as one of the most promising men in rowing now at Ithaca. His position is at No. 4. Gilman is the commodore of the Cornell navy, is twenty years old and prepared at Cascadilla School. He is 6 feet tall, weighs 185 pounds and is a resident of Ithaca.

* * *

L. EDDY, 14, is No. 3 in the boat. With Sprang is enjoying the signal honor of being a veteran. He was now on the eight that defeated Harvard by six lengths last year. Eddy's home is in Canaan, Ct., and like Welles, he prepared at Cheshire School. He is twenty-two years old, weighs 167 pounds and is 6 feet tall.

* * *

B. C. DUFFIE, '16, better known as "Big Ben," handles his oar at No. 2. He picked up rowing at Faroff House, Texas. He joined Gilman at Cascadilla School, where both rowed in the crew. He was seated at No. 3 last year as a freshman. Duffie is twenty-one years old and boasts 194 lbs. in 6 feet 2½ inches tall

* * *

F. ELLIS, '15, the Ithaca boy, hails from Mountain Home, Idaho, where he prepared for the local high school. He is one of the Cornell sweepstakers, weighing out 165 feet 10½ inches in height and weighs 162 pounds.

* * *

L. P. RAND, '16, is the baby of the shell. He is the coxswain and annoys the scales at 114 pounds. Rand is eighteen years old, and is only 5 feet 3½ inches in height. He came to Cornell from Brooklyn, N. Y., where he prepared at the Manuel Training High School.

BEDIENT FACES GREGG TODAY IN SOX-NAPS GAME

After dropping an entirely unexpected game to the Naps on their first 1914 appearance, the Red Sox, who at present are badly afflicted with the pennant bee, will probably send forth "Bullett" Hugh Bedient today and try to demonstrate that as far as winning in the noble pastime of baseball goes, tallenders are not to be considered.

Cleveland had all the breaks in luck yesterday, the Ray Collins jinx being right on the job. The unexpected southpaw shoots of Willie Mitchell were hit hard enough, but only two of the blows dropped into safe territory. With a little better luck and a little better defence, the scene seems due for a shift

Vean Gregg, who when right is about the nittiest pornader in captivity, will probably be sent up by Manager Birmingham to try and keep the tide swinging Cleveland. The local southpaw has had a good rest and should be ready to do his prettiest in case he is not feeling particularly well. Blanding, who used to be a pitcher, will get the big assignment.

The chances are that Del Gregg will be given his initial tryout with the Sox today. The former Tiger was on hand yesterday, but did not make the game, as at the last moment Uncle Bill Carrigan decided to give Janvrin another chance. Childs Harold had an easy day, so far as fielding went, most of his chances coming right at him, while in the batting part of the festivities he banged a couple with well intended vigor, but somebody was waiting to do the lassoo act. There is still an impression among the fans and players that this youngster could be made into a good first baseman, and he may be kept on the job a few days, until a decisive line on his first base abilities can be secured.

A god price was given over for the erstwhile Tiger, however, and the Sox directors may push him right into the game in order to get a chance to see whether or not they have received their money's worth.

Boston Tennis Star Wins.

NEW ORLEANS, May 26. — Irving Wright of Boston defeated Hoger Burns, one of the South's crack tennis players, 6—1, 6—1.

Miss Hyde Winner in Golf-Title Play

ORANGE, N. J, May 26. — Miss Lillian B Hyde of South Shore, L. I., the metropolitan title winner in 1910 and 1911, won the gold medal with a score of 88 in the qualifying round of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association's championship tournament, on the links of the Essex County club here

Miss Hyde was one stroke better than Miss Georgiana Bishop, of Brooklawn, Ct., another former champion, and 12 strokes ahead of Miss Marion Hollins of Westbrook, the present holder of the honor

Miss Hollins' poor score of 101 barely enabled her to qualify and play on in defence of her title.

BRAVES OUT TO TACK CARDS TO THE MAST AGAIN

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 26.—With the Braves' pitchers returning to their 1913 form, Manager George Stallings is confident that it won't be long before his aggregation will be out of last place

It was brilliant curving on the part of Southpaws Tyler and Hess and Righthanders Rudolph, James, Perdue and Quinn that brought the Hubmen home fifth last season.

This year, though, Stallings hasn't been getting good pitching. The rainy weather in the East played havoc with the hill artists. They contracted sore arms, and the eastern clubs piled up big scores every day.

The Braves are anything but a heavy-hitting club. For them to win, the pitchers have to hold the enemy to a few scores. Since the series at Pittsburgh, the Braves have been showing the form that made them the 1913 sensations

FOUR VICTORIES OUT OF FIVE GAMES.

Three out of four were gained in Pittsburgh, and the Braves opened with a 10 to 2 victory here, giving them four out of five. And it was Lefty Tyler's superb hurling which won for the Braves. He stopped the Cardinals with seven hits, but of the seven came in two innings, and netted the home team their lone scores

In six of the nine innings Tyler did not allow a safe wallop.

With Tyler back in form, and the other twirlers due to return to condition, the Braves are certain to advance. Stallings hasn't a great ball club, but he has the boys under him playing winning ball.

They are hustling; they are on their toes when they get on the base, and this, with the good pitching, is bound to send some other team down into last place within the next fortnight.

MARTIN PLAYING FAST.

The Braves appear to have picked up a genuine little star in Third Baseman Martin. Martin had a big day here today. He found the southpaw for three hits, two singles and a double, and lost a fourth when Robby pulled a line drive with his gloved hand that was sailing out for centre field.

The kid didn't have any grounders look after but gloved a stinging drive in the pinch off Cather, and drew blocked Lee Mager [illegible] out a force play. Getting out broke up a rally for the Cardinals.

Two Star Bouts at Cambridge Club

At Morton, matchmaker of the Unity Club of Cambridge, has arranged an all-star card for Friday evening. There will be two twelve round bouts. Jake Hood, the Australian lightweight, will battle Percy Cooks, while Joe Eagan will exchange blows with "Young" Jasper

Having been out late the night before, sitting up with three such friends, we did not get around in time to see yesterday's game. We figured that it would not amount to much, as the marvelous Eaglebeak Spruder is on the blink with a bum wrist. Although practically all the local fans thought as we did, and the attendance was very poor (see grandstand) something happened in the fifth inning which would have been worth staying up all night to see. We have illustrated it from a description by "Third Strike," who saw it. To prove that we are not trying to kid you, we print "Third Strike's" photo.

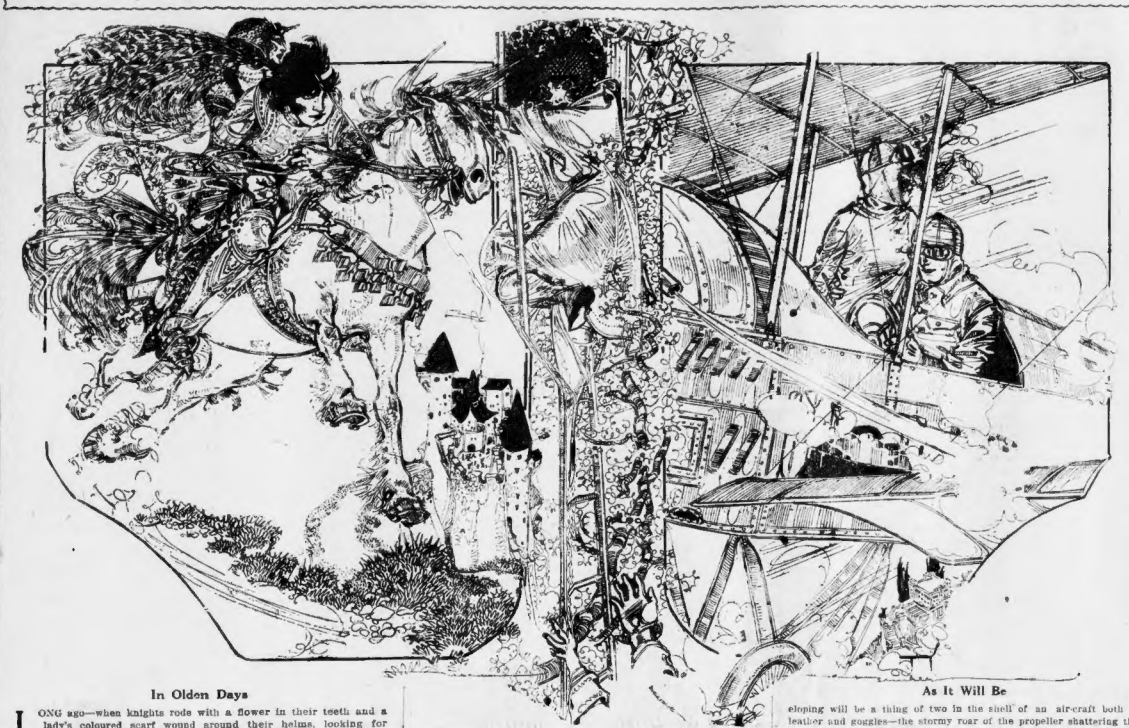
"Stolen Awn!"

As They Did It Long Ago, and as They Will

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service.



In Olden Days

LONG ago—when knights rode with a flower in their teeth and a lady's coloured scarf wound around their helms, looking for trouble, and finding it in every wood and cove—eloping was a thing of two on a great gray stallion's back—thundering hoofs sounding up the perilous road to the wall of the mountains—clanking armour and a wake of dust—flying brocade and hair—and behind, down in the inner shell of a castle islanded away from the rest of the green country on a gaunt pinnacle of rock, folk waving and shouting, the ring of running feet and clanging shields and chain-mail being dragged about, the slapping of saddles on flanks of side-stepping horses, the rolling of the draw-bridge chains—el the cry "Let down the portcullis! and after them!"

Soon now—since men are going to the clouds with goggles over their adventure-seeking eyes, a coloured scarf around their leather helms, but the colour of their lies' eyes in their hearts perhaps—eloping will be a thing of two in the shell of an air-craft both in leather and goggles—the stormy roar of the propeller shattering the great silent bubble of the sky—the soft hum of the breeze in the steel cords like remote wind in a pine-wood—the whole trackless waste of the sky to escape through—and behind, down on the terrace of an Italian-style country home, a frantically flourishing figure strangely silent like a man in a "movie"—but were you down there with him you could hear him cry, "Get out the car, Jim—and drive like sin to the nearest hangar!"

As It Will Be

"And So They Were Married and Lived Happily Ever Afterward"

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"THE reason why so many marriages are unhappy is because young ladies spend their time in making nets and not in making cages," wrote Dean Swift.

The whole philosophy of marriage is here in a nutshell and I am going to try to develop the theme today for the benefit of the many "Anxious Wives" and "Unhappy Brides" who write to me each day for advice as to how to hold or regain the love of their husbands.

Girls must learn to realize that a man has to be won over and over again. For it is the normal nature of a man's love to burn out rather quickly. And the wife who wishes the fire to keep up must learn how to provide fresh fuel.

SHE WEEPS

The pity of it is that when the flames begin to die down, the foolish little wife weeps and wails and calls on high heaven to witness that her husband vowed eternal devotion. In other words, she remembers that the man she trusted promised that the bonfire would never grow dim and smoky.

Don't waste time and dimming tears so foolishly. When the fire of love seems to pale a bit, hustle around and see what you can bring that will keep the blaze going fairly steady.

Men are vain; they love comfort; they like honesty and enjoy being amused. They hate being nagged at about trifles and they fairly abominate jealousy. "I told you so," and whining over troubles they are unable to fend off.

Four "Do's" and four "Don'ts" in weave you a cage where the lovebird will stay willingly though a net of fascination that has caught him is outworn.

Let us consider the "Do's."

First the care of your husband's vanity. Appeal to it when wisdom demands. Develop his self-esteem so that he will depend on you for appreciation of his good qualities and toleration of his weaknesses. Make him think the wife he has chosen appreciates him as no other woman can. Through this you can lead and manage him for his own good and happiness.

Then as to comfort. The importance of feeding a husband well has been dwelt upon by many inspired writers. Follow their inspiration. The old saying that the road to a man's heart is through his stomach is practically true.

Make your home a place to live in, whether it is one room or ten. Let your husband drop cigar ashes on your best rug and newspapers all over the place. It won't hurt your house, and the privilege of being comfortable will make your husband's heart glow with warmth and well being.

Be honest! Make your husband know that you would die in slow tortures but wouldn't lie to him. Between you there must be absolute faith.

THE LAST RULE

And the last rule for fuel on the bonfire of love is: Be amusing. Try to entertain your husband when he comes home. Have bright, interesting things to tell him, and have a bright interested manner that will make him enjoy letting you tell of the day's events.

It is a triumph for a wife to be a substitute for the joys of the club and corner saloon. Be so entertaining and amusing that they could never be a substitute for you.

And while you are piling all this splendid fuel on the bonfire of love avoid the four deadly extinguishers that would put it out.

Don't nag—don't harp on trifles. Men don't naturally notice trifles and they hate being annoyed over them. Learn to face little worries alone. Learn not to be unhappy if your husband forgets the anniversary of your engagement.

Peace is better than remembering.

Don't be jealous and suspicious. Honesty and good faith must make you above jealousy or fear. Trust, and you will be rewarded with loyalty to your trust unless you are dealing with a brute—then all signs fail.

If your husband makes a mistake smile and say: "Don't it lucky you managed that difficult situation so well, Jim!" But never a prize-sweeping, vanity insulting "I told you so."

Whenever you think of something to find fault with, don't rest until you have thought of something in your husband you admire just as strongly—and tell him so. Thus will the fires of vanity be kept from smoking.

And finally and over and above all—DON'T WHINE! Don't make your husband uncomfortable because you are worried or tired or in pain. It is selfish and weak because you want to be petted and petted. Learn to bear your small burdens alone and you will get all the more tender sympathy from the man whose love you have held when you have a real pain or sorrow to bear.

Household Suggestions

An egg that has been too lightly boiled may be put into the saucepan again, even after the top has been taken off, if an ordinary pin be dropped into it in a conspicuous place, where it will be found that none of the egg has been lost. Care should be taken to remove the pin.

Cover the patient over while airing the sick-room. Let down the window at the top, swing door rapidly, but quietly, for a few minutes backwards and forwards. This will quickly pump the bad air out and draw in the fresh air from the window.

If you want the best piecrust it should be made the day before you wish to use it and put into a cold pantry. Then the crust will be flaky and crisp. If you wish to retain the crispness after baking, let the pies cool thoroughly before putting away.

Before using a new dustbin have about half a dozen small holes made in it. This will allow all water to drain from same and prevent that nasty damp smell which so often comes when the lid is taken off, caused through water getting in it.

It is difficult sometimes when using essence for cakes or sweets, etc., to measure correctly the number of drops required. If a fingerlet is dipped in water and the rim of the bottle wetted in one place, the essence will be found to drop quite easily.

A troublesome corn can be eased by a poultice composed of a thin slice of lemon worn over it during the day.

Before frying bacon it is a good plan to put the rashers into boiling water for two or three minutes. They plump out to twice their ordinary thickness, and all chance is removed of their being too salt.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"WILFRED met a gent the other night that is the editor of a religious paper," said the Manicure Lady. "The two of them seemed to get along grand, I guess, because the editor told Wilfred to write a little poem about leading a good life. He gave Wilfred the check for the poem in advance, and now poor brother is worried to death, because he ain't used to writing anything like a sermon, and goodness knows his daily life ain't no running brook by which to go by. He asked father last night to give him some idea, but the old gent was just as much in the air as Wilfred, so brother finally wrote this little poem. He says he don't think he has earned the check, but it sounds all right to me. Listen, George.

"I always felt that each man should,
As through his life he wanders,
Spend most of each day in being good
And refrain from making blunders.
The little time that we are here
Upon this round earth rambling
Should not be spent in drinking beer
And in various sorts of gambling.

"How good it is to be so good
That everyone does respect you
And keep away as good men should
From things which are liable to wreck you.

I think all men should be as good
As I would be if I only could."

"It's a good thing that he got his check first for that poem," said the Head Barber, "or he would never have got it. Don't he feel ashamed none to trade that minor league stuff for a check?"

"It was only a three-dollar check," explained the Manicure Lady. "Them weekly papers don't pay much for poetry, and Wilfred said that he figured he had gave them three dollars' worth. Maybe he has, but I don't know enough about poetry to know. The main fault I can see is that the part about being good sounds kinda faint hearted, about the way Wilfred would act if he was starting out to be good himself. I don't suppose it makes much difference, though. People are going to be good if they want to, without reading no poetry telling them where to get off. I never learned none of my goodness from reading verses about it. It was always a sort of tuition with me."

"I am good some of the time myself," said the Head Barber, "and I guess all the good part of me is what I learned when I was a kid. My mother used to keep me pretty straight, and when her talking to me didn't do any good, the old gent knew where some willow switches grew, and he was there powerful with them. I guess I'm good because I'm afraid not to be. I'm scared stiff of the hereafter. So it wasn't very hard for me to be good."

"I always felt better after I have did some good deed, George," declared the Manicure Lady. "A kind of calm feeling comes stealing over me, and I seem like I was being lifted up above the earth. I think doing good is like riding in a aeroplane—they both take you above the mean things of life, and you seem to flit away on fleecy clouds through them blue heavens. There comes that old wart to have his nails did. He never gives me no tip, so I never give him no attention. Watch me fix him up with a couple of bangnails."

Do You Know That—

It is stated that the German Emperor, with the approval of his physicians, has been trying a manual labor cure in the garden of the new palace at Potsdam. His Majesty has worked with a gardener every morning, sawing wood and chopping it with an axe into suitable sizes for burning in stoves. A good quantity has been cut up each morning, which the Emperor has piled himself, the gardener getting the wood in payment for his help.

CHAPTER TWO

The Death of Marteau

MARTEAU bent over his wife tenderly and lifted her to her feet, and, looking up at him, the tears standing big in both eyes, she rocked a little picture of herself and Dulcie in his pocket.

"Not that you'll forget," she whispered, "but it will be nice to feel that we are with you through all the danger. Good-by," and her arms went up around his neck, while Dulcie clung to him frantically, not understanding what it all meant. Then he was gone, and Marianne caught Dulcie's hand and ran hastily out of the cottage down the road.

"We'll wave good-by to him, sweetheart," she said, dashing the tears away determinedly. "He won't be expecting us, and we'll be down at the train."

A special train had been hastily sent out for the volunteers, and the men were already aboard. Very few women were at the station, and as the train pulled slowly out, there were very few farewells waved from the windows. Suddenly Marianne spied him, grim and dark, seated alone at one of the windows, and she waved, fearful that he might not see her. But he leaned far out of the window, the better to carry away with him the picture of a small, flaxen-haired girl, clinging tightly to the skirts of a tall blonde woman, the wisps of a tall blonde around her head, and steadfast blue eyes in which the tears were again fast gathering. In time of war we little know when we dare feebly farewell forever.

THE WAR

The war began with a sharp and unexpected attack on the part of the Prussians, who evidently believed in wasting little time in preparation. The French commander had no sooner been advised that a Prussian army was on the way to attack, and night be expected to attack any time, before the forces were upon them, and the French were driven steadily and slowly back in a sore defeat. Almost directly the news came to hand on the hand, that the disorder was so great that no military tactics could be maintained and each man was fighting for his own life.

Henry Marteau, in the thickest of the fight, was struck down just before hostilities were suspended, by a young Prussian lieutenant, who lost power him grievously stricken, for war was new to him and to kill a man, even though in self-defence, seemed nevertheless very horrible. Marteau lay just as he had fallen, for behind lied instantly, and Lieutenant Porter was about to leave him and depart when he noticed a picture which had fallen out of his pocket and lay looking on the inside of his coat. He stooped and picked it up carelessly; it might be necessary for identification some day, and thrusting it into his own pocket, he picked his way over the battlefield on his way toward the Prussian camp.

FEARFUL NEWS

And in the meantime, Prussia was steadily pressing her way north, while France seemed powerless to stem the current. Marianne, in the little telegraph station, was one night startled by the voice of the Prussian forces were sweeping over the country, and would probably make for the station and use the wires for their own purposes. Hardly had she spelled out the last word when shouts were heard outside, and the next minute an attack fast and furious, was made upon the house. A few minutes and it was all over—Prussian men were swarming all over the place, and the station was, indeed, in the hands of the enemy. Marianne crouched in the corner, hardly knowing what to do, while the men rushed up and down the stairs on a stretcher. Then her womanliness asserted itself and she sprang up after them. After all she was a woman, and who knew better than a woman what to do in a case like this? What did it matter if the man upstairs were a Prussian? He was sick and in trouble, and she could help him out—it was no more than her duty.

A moment later and she was in the sick room, the soldiers eyeing her curiously. They had placed him on the one bed the room afforded, a small cot, for Marianne had not used the room in a good while, and the woman bent over him tenderly. He had been seriously wounded and was feverish. He begged for water constantly. She administered to him, seeming to divine just what was necessary, and finally looking up and seeing that the men were still in the room, she motioned them out and they obeyed her unquestioningly. From that time on she was not molested in any way, and was allowed to do just about as she pleased.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks continued to stagnate today. They had a slightly better tone at the start, but failed to develop any decided trend. Another $1,000,000 in gold was engaged in New York this morning for Europe. This was regarded with indifference in the stock and other markets.

By afternoon in New York most securities showed gains, including Canadian Pacific ⅝, Southern Pacific ⅝, Reading ⅝, American Tobacco ⅝, American Can ⅝, Steel ¼, Amalgamated ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ¼ and Union Pacific ⅓. Missouri Pacific was unchanged, as was Northern Pacific. New Haven was off a point, American Smelting ⅛ and Utah Copper ⅛.

In Boston United Fruit continued weak. One share sold as low as 148¼. By afternoon it was off ¾ at 149¼; Boston & Maine had sold down to 58 and was off 1 ⅛. New Haven had declined ⅛. American Telephone showed ⅛ gain. Mines were irregular.

NO CHANGE IN CONDITIONS.

There had been no change in the sentiment nor conditions governing the New York market at its opening. Prices averaged a shade higher, but the range was very narrow. Trading was of very small volume. Some operators were of the opinion that the "lap Hoe" decision by the United States Supreme Court was a good sign. But it did not serve to promote a speculative spirit. The latest report from Washington regarding anti-trust legislation is that it is doubtful if the Senate will remain in session long enough to pass the President's program, even if he continues insistent. So far, however, he has had his way in that branch as well as in the House. There is more opposition to the measures in the Senate. Even some Democrats there, it is stated, deem them too radical.

LATEST ABOUT "MOP."

The announcement that only 65 per cent. of the $25,000,000 Missouri Pacific notes which mature on June 1 had been deposited with a trust company in New York in support of the plan to extend the obligations for a year had little effect upon "Mop" or any other issue. The result was about what had been expected. After the time for depositing notes had closed, the road's directors considered the matter at a meeting and decided to extend the time until 3 p. m. Friday next. Hope seems to be strong in financial circles that by some means the sending of gold to meet the hands of a receiver will be avoided.

AMERICANS QUIET ABROAD.

Americans were irregular in the London market, but by afternoon the majority were showing small gains.

The fortnightly settlement period there began today and it is cabled that "no large speculative position" was disclosed at the carryover. Money had a harder tendency, which is attributed to unsatisfactory monetary conditions on the continent. There is no fear that the gold will soon be obtained for that city in New York. So far this year it has almost all gone to Paris.

PRICE RANGE NARROW.

The price range remained narrow all the morning and how dull business was is disclosed by the fact that share transactions up to noon totalled only about 45,000. Fluctuations in speculative leaders had little significance. There was neither demand nor pressure. Outside interest in the market was not discernible, if it existed. It is doubted if there will be any growth in speculation for a long while, although a favorable decision on the Eastern rate case might give it a temporary spurt. A few specialties advanced. General Motors sold at a new high record. Early in the morning there was an upward movement for International Mercantile Marine because of the Supreme Court decision as to the steamship company's liability in regard to Titanic claims. General Electric advanced a point. A financial publication says: "Some brokers are suggesting to customers the selling of United Fruit and reinvestment of proceeds in General Electric, both 8 per cent. stocks with occasional extras."

COPPERS VERY QUIET.

Coppers as a class were among the quietest issues in both the local and the New York market. The condition of the metal trade is reflected by shares. Producers are disappointed at the cessation of demand for electrolytic by domestic consumers. Recent business has been almost wholly confined to buying of small lots by Europeans. But large selling interests are holding their price firmly at 14½ cents a pound. In the London copper warrants market today sales amounted only to 150 tons of spot and 250 tons of futures.

NO RATE VERDICT SOON.

A Washington dispatch says there will be no decision on the request of Eastern railroads for a 5 per cent. advance in freight rates for more than a month, quoting a high authority on the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The report circulated in the past two or three days that a decision would be immediately forthcoming was quashed by this denial.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

Including yesterday's engagements of $4,000,000 and $1,000,000 today, Europe has obtained $16,000,000 in gold in New York since May 8.

The London copper warrants market was steady and spot and futures were unchanged up to noon today. At the close each was up 1s. 3d.

Pig iron buying last week was on an increased scale and it is reported that some mills of the Republic Iron & Steel Co. have resumed operations on a capacity basis.

The stock of gold of the Bank of Germany increased 10,700,000 marks last week.

JORDAN ASKS CHECK ON IRISH EMIGRATION

The AMERICAN prints the following letter in full, sent to the Freeman's Journal, Dublin, Ire., by Michael J. Jordan, national secretary of the United Irish League of America:

Editor of the Freeman's Journal, Dublin, Ireland:

At the suggestion of many of the friends of Ireland here, I write to say a few words of warning to the young men and women of Ireland who may now be intending to emigrate to the United States. I hope that while it may not be in time that will pause and consider what the future prospects may be before they take the final step which will in all probability mean that they leave forever the land of their birth.

After a careful study of the conditions of emigration here, I think it may be safely stated that 5 per cent. of them do not improve their condition by emigrating to the United States. It is a true of America today as it is of the United Kingdom that the labor market is already overcrowded. This applies as well to the field of skilled as of unskilled labor.

The principal reason for emigration seems to be, first, the rosy-colored letters written home to Ireland by many girls who live in families and who, in the desire to make their friends feel comfortable, tell them many wonderful stories of the prospects of America, and never tell them of the real facts of the grinding life to which young Irish men and women subject themselves in this country.

DESCRIBES CONDITIONS.

Then there is the lure of a higher standard of wages, which is only superficial. The average workman in Ireland can live cheaper, fare better, and provide more certainty for his family out of his yearly wages than a man in a similar trade or under similar conditions in America. It is unnecessary to go into the statistics of the wages today which are paid in America, but intending immigrants ought at least to make some inquiries before they finally decide to leave their own land.

I am not only speaking for myself, but for all of our friends here, when I say that the lot of the emigrant to the United States today is not improved, but is made much worse than it possibly could be, under the worst circumstances in Ireland.

Then, many people in Ireland are deluded by the apparent possession of riches which some of the returned emigrants seem to show. This, too, is a fallacy which may be very easily investigated by any one who takes time to think.

It often happens that the man and woman of our race spend the whole savings of their lifetime in one visit to the land of their birth, with the desire to make everything appear as pleasant as possible, only to return to the heart-breaking struggle which they have been obliged to make to put this money together. It frequently happens that on the return of our friends to the United States, after passing a few pleasant months in Ireland, their positions have been taken by other workers in the same field, and the result then is that conditions are worse than I would care to describe.

SUGGESTS A CHECK.

In the professional fields there is absolutely nothing to which a young Irish man or woman can aspire in the United States. We have graduating from our public schools every year hundreds. In the city of Boston about 4,000 children who enter the primary and avail surroundings to which they are accustomed, who understand the nature of these surroundings, and who have been trained to fit in to the American method of life.

It seems worse than folly for the young men and women of Ireland to think of going into competition with young aspirants who have been trained upon their own soil.

Scarcely a day passes that some evidence is not forthcoming of the utter recklessness of some Irish men or women who leave their good positions in Ireland and risk all in coming to America.

I therefore cannot reiterate too strongly the need of some check being placed upon emigration from Ireland.

The Poor Little Rich Directors

In the amazing story told by Mr. Mellen of the management of the New Haven Railroad during the domination of that property by the late J. Pierpont Morgan no chapter is more engrossing, none tells of a more incomprehensible state of mind on the part of men of substance and of dignity than that in which the witness told of the awe inspired by Mr. Morgan.

The last day the witness was on the stand Governor Folk drew from him a series of "thumbnail sketches" of the individual directors. All were described as men of more than ordinary parts. One "would lend dignity to any board." Another was "the salt of the earth." A third was "one of the kind of directors that directs. He took his position seriously and wanted to know what was going on." Many were "very wealthy men," and one had the distinction of "illuminating the sessions of the board with scintillations of wisdom."

Of the board as a whole, Mr. Mellen said earnestly:

"I think they were the finest body of men ever gathered around a table. They took their duties seriously, and I think everything discussed was discussed seriously."

Yet when a sub-committee dominated by Mr. Morgan purchased for $11,000,000 a property which it had been thought could be had for five, and which has up to the present time cost $35,000,000, and is still costing, not one of this ideal board—not even the exceptional one who "wanted to know what was going on"—dared to ask the reason for the deal or any of its details of Mr. Morgan!

They descended upon the unfortunate Mellen with strange oaths, like "Holy Caesarea Philippi," and with charges of "living high," but when referred to the mighty Morgan lowered their voices, looked abashed and slunk out of the offices like guilty schoolboys caught speaking disrespectfully of teacher. Even Mellen, president of the road as he was, submitted in abject servility to a snub from the Czar, for asking a question emphatically in line with his duty, and when he disapproved of a report which concealed instead of explaining the circumstances of a prodigious expenditure of the stockholders' money, surreptitiously noted his dissent on the back of the report instead of manfully urging it before the board and its master mind.

What was the amazing quality of mind, or what the personal characteristic that made Morgan so fearsome a figure to his associates? He was dominant, intolerant, pitiless in his hostilities. The whole world knows that. But these were men of substance and of standing. He might take from them their places on the New Haven directorate, but he could hardly wrest from them their wealth or reduce them to beggary. Yet before him they groveled as no independent mechanic would before his boss. The New Haven millionaires could well have taken lessons in dignity and self-respect from any member of a labor union in their employ.

The course of this investigation is tearing to shreds the mighty reputation of Morgan as a financier. It shows him overloading a rich property with costly additions until it was reduced to beggary. It convicts him of squandering the money of stockholders and permitting, if not conniving at, crooked bookkeeping to cover up loans and other transactions of doubtful legality. But it even enhances his reputation as a man of personal power, for his control of this body of financially independent and presumably self-respecting men was dictatorial. Mr. Mellen was able to recall out one vote cast against the Master's will, and that by William Rockefeller.

Humble citizens will have to correct one of their time-honored fallacies about wealth. It does not necessarily enable its possessor to be independent or self-respecting. The New Haven board of millionaire directors certainly manifested neither quality.

Letters from American Readers

"IS THERE RESTITUTION?"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—As one of the many thousands poor, shorn, deluded lambs of the N. Y., N. H. & Heartless Railroad, I rise to submit a few questions. Have the two words "legal restitution" been forever barred and silenced by our courts of law and justice?

The records show that even Mr. Mellen cried out "Jerusalem!" when Mr. Morgan, "without consulting the board of directors," paid the Mutual Life Insurance Company 165 for 16,634 shares of the Worcester, Nashua & Rochester Railroad, which the records show is actually worth about 110, or even less.

United States Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island (Mr. Mellen admits on the stand under oath), got $20,000,000 for the Rhode Island trolley road, which he (Mr. Mellen) also admits under oath is worth about $7,000,000, and in accordance with the figures rendered the Interstate Commerce Board for the year ending June 30, 1913, was operated at an actual loss of nearly $400,000, which even caused Director Skinner (what's in a name?) to rise majestically in his seat and then utterly collapse, after saying, "Great Caesar!"

On October 7, 1908, the minutes of a meeting of the N. Y., N. H. & Heartless Railroad were falsified and so admitted by Mr. Mellen (under oath), but Morgan (the master mind) voted to pay for prayers.

The New York, Westchester & Boston Railroad, Mr. Mellen admits under oath, cost the N. Y., N. H. & Heartless Railroad $35,000,000 of stockholders' good money and is today carrying for the stockholders less than one-fifth of its actual fixed charges, and is appraised by Mr. Mellen (under oath) as being worth about $9,000,000, or one-quarter of its actual cost.

The first mortgage 4½ bonds of the road sold today at 72. I bought some at 98 and was told I had a plum. The Shore Line Electric Road (owned by Morton F. Plant, also a director of the N. Y., N. H. & Heartless) was planted on the N. Y., N. H. & Heartless by Mr. Plant, etc., etc.

Again I rise feebly in my seat and in my wrath cry out: Is there such a thing as restitution?

A HELPFUL LIBRARY

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The Brookline Public Library system is worthy of praise, in my opinion, especially for the intelligent efforts made by the attendants to help library patrons in getting books. I refer to the branch library at Coolidge Corner, because that is the one I have used. Presumably the branch gets its methods from the main library.

A selection of books is wise and the supply adequate. The postcard system, by which one may reserve a call for a popular book, is convenient. Recently I told an attendant at the Coolidge Corner branch that I wished a book on ancient history for home reading, not a mere text book, all dates, but one designed for "easy reading," as I expressed it. The attendant made a note or two and said she would look up what I wished and have it for me from the main library the next night.

There is a spirit of efficiency and desire to help the patrons that is refreshing. The same spirit and methods may be characteristic of other libraries in the Metropolitan District. This letter is not meant to disparage other libraries, merely to call attention to that good service which is so often taken for granted by a thoughtless public.

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER LXV.

LOOKING back over the days following Caryl's disappearance—her elopement, as Kelley Delaine was careful to call it—Julia always remembered distinctly two things—her own anguish and her sweetheart's goodness. In telling her the awful truth he had spoken briefly and compassionately. "She has gone away to be married," he had said.

"To—to—John Redfield?" Julia asked quickly. "He is a good man, isn't he?"

Perhaps the hardest ordeal which Kelley Delaine ever had was to tell Julia Marvin that her sister had lied in giving John Redfield's name as that of the man with whom she was infatuated, and that as yet no trace of the girl or her "friend" could be found.

Julia tried to be brave, but the terror and desolation that overwhelmed her as she thought of facing life in the store and lodging house now that Caryl was gone made her appreciate that Delaine was right in urging her to go back to her father's house for a while. She had a strange sense of unregretfully wasting an opportunity when she gave up her position at Baird's; but nothing made much difference to her now, except thoughts of Caryl and of Delaine. She seemed for weeks to wander in a dream.

Her father was pathetically glad to see her. He had aged within the past few months and welcomed her eagerly. When she told him of the great sorrow that had come upon them, the old man spoke no word of blame, and agreed unprotestingly to Julia's suggestion that her stepmother be kept in ignorance of what had happened.

"It is enough for her to know that Caryl has left Boston to take a position in another city," he said gravely. "Our secret and the family shame—if shame there is—is ours, and ours alone, my child."

Perhaps there was something in Julia's increased gentleness or softened manner that lessened Mrs. Marvin's animosity toward her. So tactfully and unobtrusively did the girl lift sundry burdens from the wife's shoulders that she soon was accepted by the masterful mistress of the home as a not unpleasant addition to the household.

Meanwhile Kelley Delaine was leaving no stone unturned to learn that which might lessen Julia's anxiety. Somerdyke had sailed for South America. His engagement to Dora Redfield had been announced just before his departure. To him Delaine wrote, hoping that he could throw some light on Caryl's conduct or tell him who her companion was.

When at last Somerdyke's reply came it contained the information that the writer had introduced Ben Hadley to Delaine's stenographer, as Ben had asked for an introduction.

"If any trouble has come of it," I'm sorry," Somerdyke wrote. "I supposed then that Hadley was a decent sort. I did not discover until just before I left Boston that he has a wife and child down South somewhere."

Kelley Delaine, reading this, groaned.

He had promised Julia to tell her all that he learned. Here was another blow for her. And the prospect of his next visit to her home was shadowed by the thought of the suffering of the woman who would be watching and longing for his coming. But as knew how brave and patient she would be, and he loved her all the more because of her self-control.

In spite of sadness and complete absence of any further information about Caryl, Julia found the weeks and months slipping slowly away. At last the Spring came, and on the 1st of May she and Kelley Delaine were quietly married by the old minister who had baptized her. Then, with affectionate words from her father and actual tears from her stepmother, Julia set forth again to begin a new life in Boston.

Julia Delaine had been married for six months when her husband came into their cozy living-room one night, his face sad and pale. It was useless to attempt to hide from his wife the knowledge that he had heard some distressing news, for she noted his changed countenance, and the fear that was always in her mind sprang to her eyes as she whispered—"Caryl?"

"Yes, dear," he said compassionately. "She is in a hospital. She is desperately ill and gave my name when she appreciated that she could not get well. She said I knew her family and would bring you to her. I will take you to her at once, darling."

An hour later Julia stood in the public ward by the screened bed on which lay her little sister. The girl's eyes were closed, and the once round face was so pinched and pale that one who had not known Caryl Marvin well would scarcely have recognized this wasted creature.

The physician in attendance and the clergyman who had been summoned to talk with the patient told Julia and her husband what they knew about the case.

All that Caryl had suffered was known only by herself and the man who had wrecked her life and then cast it aside as a very little thing. An overwhelming sense of the injustice of the world shook Julia as she gazed on the altered face of the child who had been her care and companion.

"Oh," whispered the wife, clinging to her husband, "where is he—the man—this night? Comfortable, probable, while there is my little sister paying with her life for his sin as well as for her own. It isn't fair!"

"Hush, darling," cautioned Kelley. "See, she is opening her eyes and looking at you."

Julia went forward swiftly and bent over the bed. "Dear little girl!" she murmured.

Caryl eyed her wonderingly and tried to smile. "Poor old Judy," she breathed. "I did not know you were here."

There was a moment's silence while the dying girl gazed into the loving face bending over her. Then her lips moved again.

"I did not mean to be bad, Judy," she whispered. "Will you forgive me?"

The older sister dropped on her knees by the bed and put her arms about the broken, dying creature. "There is nothing to forgive, darling," she sobbed. "You have paid, and God forgives."

The girl smiled. "Yes," she murmured. "He forgives."

The smile was still on the gray lips when the nurse laid her hand gently on Julia's shoulder. Come away, Mrs. Delaine," she urged. "She is asleep now."

"Yes, dear," Delaine added softly. "Caryl is safe at last."

And Julia, looking at the peaceful face repeated, "Yes, she is safe at last—thank God!"

* * *

On the morning of their first wedding anniversary Julia and Kelley Delaine stood at their window looking out toward the Park, where the trees were bursting into bud. There had been a silence between the pair as each thought what the day meant for them both. Julia was the first to speak.

"I am very happy, Kelley," she said, laying her head on his shoulder.

The man drew her to him with a swift motion of tenderness.

"I am the happiest man in the world," he told her, "and I love you better with each day that passes."

His wife smiled, yet there were tears in her eyes. "Thank you for telling me that, dear," she murmured.

"Why, Julia," her husband protested, "you knew it all already, didn't you darling?"

"Of course I did!" she acknowledged with a happy laugh. "But, being a woman, I like to hear you say it!"

THE END.

In-Shoots

Sometimes we forget the teachings of experience.

Pride occasionally has a fall without getting a lasting bump.

It is useless to worry over the troubles of a friend; in fact it is useless for him to worry.

The unskilled cook is often as dangerous as a smallpox patient at large.

It is often easier to read a man than it is to make use of the knowledge gained.

We are always suspicious of the person who gives the same amount of laugh to every joke we tell.

When we see portraits of the wives of prominent men we can readily understand how some of them got to the front.

Good intentions will often steer a fellow into a lot of trouble.

Faith—Its Constructive Power Is Greater Than That Which Genius and Industry Combined Can Produce—Live Worthy of God.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

THERE are many faiths, many creeds, many religions in the world. All meet at one Great Centre—the belief in an over-ruling Power, whether that Power be called God, or Allah, or Om, or The Nameless One, does not matter. Whether the devotees of these religions pray after one manner or another, whether they worship in churches or temples or in shrines, or in the open, does not matter so long as they are devout and earnest in their faith. And so long as they strive with uplifted thoughts to live worthy of the Unseen Presence.

But the greatest possible disaster which can befall a human being is to possess no faith of any kind; to live on this little earth, to gaze upon the millions of stars, to see the wonders of nature, and to believe we came into existence as the mushroom comes and pass as it passes.

A great surprise awaits such minds after they are freed from the body. They will find there is no such thing as death; and in other realms and through other lives they will be made to learn the lessons of eternity.

Imagine a man who has near relatives and dear friends, yet, through some optical disease, is unable to see and recognize them. He sees the animals and the trees, and the ocean and the fields, and some strange individuals; but he cannot see or recognize anyone who is near to him; anyone who desires to win his affections and to bestow favors upon him.

How sad would seem his lot. And sadder still would be his fate if he refused to believe that such beings existed.

Such is the condition of the man who has no faith in the existence of any world or any beings outside of this earth. He is limiting his opportunities for happiness and for helpfulness. No matter how great a humanitarian he may be, how earnestly he may be working to benefit his kind, he is missing the best and surest road to the highest achievement.

The constructive power of faith is greater than that which genius and industry combined can produce. No human brain, however colossal, can open such roadways of endeavor as a sublime and unswerving faith can blaze through seemingly impenetrable forests.

Faith in one's self is admirable and effective; but when that faith is based on knowledge of one's divine inheritance and the consequent assistance of the invisible kin, it is well-nigh omnipotent in its force.

The man who is without faith of any kind is a tragic figure. The woman without faith is little short of a monstrosity. For, even as woman seems to be only wholly woman when enveloped in her feminine draperies, so the mantle of faith seems to belong to her by divine right. And without it she seems stripped of her sex charms.

If by unfortunate education or environment a woman finds herself with no faith, let her seek until she finds.

An hour alone every day making the mind passive after a silent plea for light (relaxing wholly and emptying the vessel of the brain of all human conceit and prejudice) will eventually bring results. From sources unexpected and by paths undreamed of understanding will come.

For all about us dwell the invisible helpers, ready to give comfort to those who are in sorrow, knowledge to those who seek light and relief to those who are in despair.

This one great, mighty creative power we call God sends forth these helpers to walk among men.

Strength, vital force, constructive power, insight, all may be obtained from these helpers by minds which are open to their influence.

And while the earthly pathway may be brightened and cheered by their assistance, gates are being opened and mansions prepared in realms just beyond for the soul that believes and understands.

Into those realms will the unbeliever also pass, but he will find himself with no home prepared, for the architect of those homes is faith. And he will need wander about homeless until he sees and understands and calls the architect to his assistance.

The man without faith in anything but his own abilities is invariably unduly conceited. He gives to himself the devotion and admiration which the reverent soul gives God; and, from lack of a conception of anything greater than himself, he fails to draw from the higher sources the magnetic forces which pour upon the mind that reaches out to the Infinite.

Would you develop to the utmost your best and strongest qualities; would you make the most of life's opportunities for usefulness; would you equip yourself for the largest sphere you can occupy here on earth; would you build mansions in the world to come, and would you obtain the most satisfying happiness possible?

Then set your mind and soul the task of cultivating a faith in unseen powers and divine influences.

Seek in reverence, and you shall find.

Think of yourself as part of these gorgeous and potential systems of universes which fill space. Know that our sun is only but one billions of suns; our world but one of billions of worlds, and all these worlds within worlds are governed and guided by order and precision. That consciousness alone should create reverence in the heart of a stone.

Unthinkable thought has produced these universes. Some power so great we cannot even imagine it thought of these universes before they were. You are an expression of this power. Your thoughts are either creative or destructive. They are tearing down or building something continually.

We build our future thought by thought,
Or good, or bad, and know it not;
Yet so the universe was wrought.
Thought is another name for fate;
Choose then thy destiny and wait;
For love brings love and hate brings hate.
Thought like an arrow flies where sent;
Aim well; be sure of thy intent;
And make thine own environment.
Nothing can bid thy purpose pause;
Mind is the universal cause;
The Lord God thought, and lo! He WAS!

Let the God in thee rise and say
To adverse circumstances, "Obey."
And thy dear wish shall have its way.

Science for Workers

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q. 1, "Is it not possible that the smooth ocean may act as an immense lens in focusing the heat of distant suns within the earth or possibly on some other planet?"

Q. 2. "Is there any refraction of the sun's rays or of terrestrial magnetism in passing through our forty miles of atmosphere?"

Q. 3. "Is there any exchange of heat or other influence between our planet and others?

A. 1. No. The most sensitive bolometers ever made, as used by Langley and others, able to measure 1-1,000,000th degree F. of heat, could not detect heat enough coming from the giant suns Vega, Sirius, Arcturus or Rigel to be accurately measured. The first layer of water on the surface of the sea even of molecular thickness absorbs all stellar heat, and the bottom of the ocean is always cold. And it is impossible to focus any heat on any other planet.

A. 2. There is refraction of the sun's rays by our air, but it is known to be nearer 200 miles deep than 40. The air actually acts as a lens and refracts light into a focus exactly opposite in direction from the sun. But this concentration of light is dim and distant from the earth 857,000 miles. The nearest approach of Mars to the earth is 35,500,000 miles, so the focus would fall short 34,643,000 miles. But magnetism has never been refracted, that is, turned out of its course in a straight line—by any transmitting medium yet discovered.

A. 3. If there is any exchange of heat between the planets by human device can measure it, for the bolometer cannot be increased in its delicency sufficient to detect the minute amount. That is, the platinum wire—the nerve, more sensitive than human nerves, cannot be made any thinner and hold together in use. No influence of the planets upon each other has ever been detected by the most accomplished observers with the most sensitive instruments that can be made, besides two, gravitation and light. It must be that heat from the sun of the planets is absorbed by them since none comes to the earth by reflection intense enough to be measured by an electric nerve thinner than a spider's thread.
